FIRST PHOTOGRAPHS

Posed photographs of William Cardinal O'Connell, taken on board the Canopic to-day by Richard Sears, staff photographer of the American. Mr. Sears took the photographs of the Cardinal in his cabin and passed them on to the American's specially chartered tug Neponset, where they were developed and rushed to the American office.

Collector Curtis and Cardinal O'Connell, posed especially for the AMERICAN on board the Canopic. Mr. Curtis was the first government official to greet the Cardinal on his entry into Boston harbor. There was not the slightest hitch in the mammoth reception plans, due to the painstaking work of the collector.

BREADLINE FORMED AT LAWRENCE; LEADER ETTOR HELD WITHOUT BAIL

LAWRENCE, Jan. 31.—The first bread-line of the Lawrence strike was started to-day, when 5,000 loaves, provided by Harry Aronson, were given away to strikers and their families.

5,000 LOAVES GONE IN AN HOUR.

The rush of hungry strikers was so great that the 5,000 loaves were gone within sixty minutes from the time distribution began at 11 o'clock.

Joseph J. Ettor, the strike leader, and Arturo M. Giovannitti, editor of an Italian newspaper in New York, were held without bail by Associate Justice Chandler in Lawrence District Court for a continued hearing on February 9 on joint charges of being accessories to the murder of Annie Lopizzo, who was shot and killed during Monday night's rioting.

They pleaded not guilty. Their counsel, George H. Roewer of Boston, argued for bail, but this was refused by Judge Chandler. Under strong guard Ettor and Giovannitti were taken to Lawrence jail.

News of their incarceration angered sixty strikers and strike committeemen who awaited the outcome of the court hearing at strike headquarters.

Smith in Ettor's Place.

From the jail Ettor this noon issued a statement to the strikers. The keynote of it was: "Stand firm. We will yet win." The statement was conservative and free from incendiary suggestion.

Ettor also had urgent telegrams sent to Vincent St. John, national secretary of the Industrial Workers of the World, at Chicago, and to William D. Haywood, who was here a few days ago, but who has since gone to Toledo, to hurry to Lawrence. St. John is acted as a radical.

Meanwhile the strike committee elected Gilbert Smith as chairman to succeed Ettor while the latter is in jail.

An important arrest to-day was that of Angelo Rocco on a charge of inciting to riot. He is an Italian, twenty-seven years old, but a member of the junior class of the Lawrence High School. He is charged with inciting a riot Monday, January 15. He is a member of the "inside committee of six" at strike headquarters. He was locked up at 9:30 by City Marshal O'Sullivan when he came for the second time to the police station, demanding to see Ettor.

Soldiers Guard Bread Line.

The bread line, which was significant of the strikers' destitution, to-day was formed at Harry Aronson's shoe store, No. 497 Essex street. Mr. Aronson said after the distribution began:

"In going around yesterday I soon realized the desperate condition of many strikers. I felt that it was my duty as a business man to help in this emergency. So I gave an order for this amount of bread. I am convinced by what I saw this morning that many people in the city are absolutely in need of the staff of life."

The distribution was guarded by five soldiers, but the applicants were only too thankful to get the bread to make the least sign of trouble. Men, women and children were in the line. They took the bread gratefully, with many thanks to the donor. The last loaf was gone by 12 o'clock. Then those who remained gave a cheer for Mr. Aronson.

Soup kitchen work has been going on all the week at Prince-Belgian Hall. To-day the distribution of bread to-day brought the first actual bread-line of the strike.

Executive Session Held.

The strike committee held an executive session this forenoon which lasted more than three hours, the longest since the strike started. No information was given out as to what the meeting was for.

They pleaded not guilty. Their counsel, George H. Roewer of Boston, attorney for William Cardinal O'Connell, returning from Rome, reached Long Wharf, Atlantic avenue, to-day, at 12 o'clock.

The Cardinal and his suite received a tremendous reception at the wharf from the great throng that had gathered.

The parade started shortly afternoon and the Cardinal was escorted to his home in the Back Bay.

The welcoming committee, headed by Mayor Fitzgerald, which had gone down the Harbor earlier in the day, and which had boarded the Canopic at quarantine, learned that there was smallpox on board, and it was then decided to have the Cardinal and his suite transferred to the boarding revenue cutter Winnisimmet, on which the welcoming committee had gone to greet the Cardinal.

Ovation on Harbor Trip.

The cardinal and his party left the Canopic at 11.15. Before the cardinal left the ship sailors dusted the snow from the accommodation ladder and sanded the steps so that it was comparatively easy and perfectly safe for him to get from the larger to the smaller boat.

Had the doctors found everything on board the Canopic in good shape the cardinal would have come to Charlestown and then have been transferred to the Winnisimmet.

Coming up the Harbor the Winnisimmet had as convoys the Vigilant, which is the Health Board's boat, and the Neponset, the AMERICAN'S tug. The Vigilant was on the starboard quarter and the Neponset on the port.

As the Winnisimmet moved away from the Canopic the big ship in which the Cardinal had crossed the sea roared out three long blasts in honor of the distinguished party that had disembarked. The salute was returned by the smaller boat.

The trip up the harbor was a continuous ovation in the way of screaming whistles from all sorts of craft.

The Cardinal, showing happiness in the gleam of his face, rode in the pilot house of the cutter up the harbor. Snow filled the air and it was impossible to see any great distance.

The tug Monitor, carrying members of the welcoming committee, arrived at Long Wharf at 11:50 o'clock and was followed ten minutes later by the Winnisimmet.

The arrival of the party was greeted by hearty cheering by the crowd on Long Wharf, to which the cardinal responded by removing his biretta, which he waved at the group on the wharf. The Ninth Regiment band played "America."

A gangplank, decked in the national colors, and covered with a crimson carpet, was placed on the Winnisimmet, and Cardinal O'Connell, followed by Bishop Anderson, Father Coppinger and others of his party and of the committee, came ashore.

A delegation of fourth degree Knights of Columbus formed an aisle through which the party passed to the Cardinal's limousine. Cardinal O'Connell was clad in his robes of office, beneath his fur coat. After he entered the car the procession started for his residence in Granby street.

CARDINAL O'CONNELL, HOME AGAIN, WELCOMED BY THOUSANDS

It was headed by the fourth degree knights, wearing frock coats, silk hats, grey gloves and white sashes with red, white and blue silk decoration. They had on their chests cardinal red rosettes, from which were suspended oxidized silver medallions, with the cardinal's bust.

At Quarantine at Daylight.

The Canopic reached Quarantine shortly after daylight. She had been at anchor for several hours at sea just off Boston Lightship. When she came slowly into Quarantine and dropped anchor the Vigilant, carrying Port Physician Crawford, came alongside. The port physician went aboard.

The Boston AMERICAN tug Neponset, decorated in keeping with the occasion, reached the Canopic a few minutes after 8 o'clock. When the tug steamed up it was noticed that the cardinal and his suite were standing on the promenade deck of the ship. They were attracted to the AMERICAN'S tug by the decorations.

The cardinal smiled and touching his hat, saluted the AMERICAN representative, who stood on the forward quarter of the tug. The AMERICAN representative doffed his hat and bowed to the distinguished company. The members of the cardinal's suite removed their hats and returned the bow, all smiling in their happiness to get home.

Captain Roger Sears was in command of the "Neponset," and he saluted the Cardinal and his party with a long whistle. He brought the tug up alongside the Canopic in masterly fashion, so that those on the tug were able to speak with those on the steamer.

The cardinal wore a heavy overcoat of dark material and the flat, broad-brimmed hat of his office.

It was snowing hard, but the cardinal and his party were protected from it.

Committee Boards Canopic.

The boarding revenue cutter, Winnisimmet, carrying the welcoming committee, headed by Mayor Fitzgerald, steamed up through the haze about 8:25. The cutter had been delayed by the steamship Cestrian which was ahead of it and was running very slowly. With the welcoming committee were several Federal officials.

When the Winnisimmet came alongside of the Canopic the accommodation ladder was let down from the big ship to the smaller boat. This ladder is a series of steps, and by its use the boarding of the Canopic was made much easier than if one had to climb the ladder ordinarily used.

The committee and Federal officials went aboard. There were about fifty of them. They proceeded to the saloon of the ship and Mayor Fitzgerald made an address of welcome, to which the cardinal made a feeling and eloquent reply.

Mayor Fitzgerald delivered an address of welcome to the cardinal, in which he said:

The Mayor's Greeting.

"Your Eminence—I bid you welcome back to America on behalf of the citizens of Boston and the million and a half of Catholics throughout New England, who owe allegiance to you as their spiritual superior.

"Your frequent journeys abroad and your life in a foreign environment have not, we are convinced, diminished your attachment for the ways and thoughts that are peculiar to the people among whom you were born. Rather, they have broadened your vision and enabled you to encompass a wider horizon in which all men, whatever be their speech, or color, or mode of life, stand as the children of a common Father.

"We congratulate you upon these opportunities which you have enjoyed and ourselves that we are to be the beneficiaries of the enlarged power for good that has thus been conferred upon you, and it is not only the members of your own flock who will profit by your cunsels and ministrations. The presence of so powerful a personality in our midst, enjoying the influence which is yours by virtue of your exalted office, cannot fail to affect notably the life of the whole city, and the large share which is taken in this demonstration by those who are not of your faith indicates that you stand with them upon common ground in matters of social and civic import.

"I greet you not only as one who worships with you at a common altar, but as the official representative of the people of Boston, who look upon you as one of their most distinguished sons, crowned with the highest honors of your calling. In the name of the people of Boston, I bid you welcome to the city and assure you of their good will and co-operation in all your future efforts for the common weal."

The Cardinal's Response.

Responding to the address of welcome made by Mayor Fitzgerald, Cardinal O'Connell said:

"I wish to express my gratitude at the welcome extended to me from so many who represent the best citizenship, patriotism and commercial supremacy of the city of Boston.

"I bring with me the blessing of the Holy Father not only to the Catholic people of New England, but to those who are not Catholics.

"I am delighted beyond expression at returning to Boston, of whose citizenship I am proud and to my native land by birthright.

"I give the blessing of the Pope to all of my own flock and those who are not Catholics."

Decorations were seen all over the city of Boston in honor of the cardinal's homecoming. Prominent among the numerous displays was the attraction at City Hall, the whole building being enveloped in flags, bunting and the seal of the city. All along the line on Washington street the large department stores were beautifully decorated and in scores of places in the business section the store fronts and windows were handsomely draped.

Nearly all of the hotels along the line of parade were draped in colors and in the residential sections a large percentage of the homes were decorated. The entire route covered by the parade was one continuous show of decoration.

Arch of Honor at Residence.

The Cathedral at the South End was magnificently decorated and the arch of honor in front of the residence of the archbishop presented a fine sight. On both sides of the sweep of the arch was inscribed the words "Welcome Home to Our Cardinal," and at the pinnacle of each column a large American flag waved, surrounded at each corner of the column by emblematic flags of various orders in the church and Catholic orders.

With the cardinal there arrived also the Right. Rev. Monsignor Edward J. Moriarty, rector of St. Peter's Church, Cambridge; the Very Rev. Monsignor Michael J. Splaine, D. D., chancellor of the archdiocese; the Rev. Patrick J. Supple, D. D., rector of St. John's Church, Roxbury, and the Rev. Joseph E. Coppinger, rector of the Church of St. Aidan, Brookline.

These clergy were the cardinal's suite during his historic visit to Rome and were in attendance on their archbishop during the recent consistory at which he was elevated to the rank of prince of the church and made a member of the Sacred College of Cardinals.

Greeted by Bishop.

The Canopic was behind her schedule in reaching Boston. This was due to a call made at Palermo and also to heavy head seas encountered almost continuously in crossing the Atlantic. But considering all the weather circumstances the ship made remarkably good time to Boston Light on her voyage of 10,000 miles.

Besides Bishop Anderson there were also on board the revenue boat Mayor Fitzgerald, Joseph H. O'Neil, James M. Prendergast, William J. Dooley, Harry P. Nawn, Daniel L. Prendergast and John A. Bruen, officers of the reception committee.

When the cardinal landed he was greeted by the following members of the reception committee other than those who had met the cardinal at quarantine: Joseph M. Morrison, Patrick M. Keating, James W. Kenney, Humphrey O'Sullivan, James S. Murphy, Thomas B. Fitzpatrick, Colonel P. H. Corr, Henry V. Cunningham, Patrick McGovern, Thomas F. Boyle, John J. Kennedy, Henry Wessling, Thomas J. Women's, Small Women's & Misses' Coats and Suits at Half Price and Less

If we were getting, at Half Price, what we ourselves paid for these very garments, that would mean that when we got full prices on the same lots, we made a profit of a hundred per cent. and more. On the contrary, OUR FIRST PRICES ARE SO LIBERAL THAT OUR REDUCED PRICES ARE WITHOUT COMPARISON. The following lots should have been sold before this. They would have been but for the unfavorable weather. Regardless of weather, however, they should disappear quickly at these prices:

Large Police Detail.

There were 500 patrolmen and sixteen sergeants in charge of the commanding officers of Divisions 2, 4, 15 and 16 on duty. Sergeant P. S. Skillings and eight men from the Back Bay station did personal escort and guard to the Cardinal. Sergeant Skillings and six men led the procession and two of his men marched in the rear as a flanking guard.

In the police detail were 150 men Captain Yeaton of the Charlestown station was at the White Star Line dock in Charlestown with fifteen men to handle the crowds there. There were also ten inspectors from Police Headquarters at Long Wharf to prevent thieves from working in the crowds.

Captains Sullivan, Canney, Yeaton and Jones will be on the street in full uniform during the parade, and marching in it were some of the most prominent officials of the department.

In the police detail will be 150 men from the Court Square Police Station, 60 men from Station 4, Lagrange street; 170 men from Station 16, Back Bay, not including the sergeant and eight men who will escort the cardinal.

Captain Driscoll of the East Dedham street station will have 150 men at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross to-morrow morning at the special service in honor of the cardinal.

Cardinal O'Connell, when met on board the Canopic down the bay upon his return from Rome to-day, announced a number of appointments by the Pope, which will be cheerful news for their hosts of friends.

The following were made Monsignors:
The Rev. P. J. Supple of Boston.
The Rev. Peter Ronan of Dorchester.
The Rev. Ambrose Roche of Watertown.
The Rev. William O'Brien of Lowell.

It was also announced that the Rev. Monsignor M. J. Splaine of Boston had been made Domestic Prelate.

With Cardinal's Suite.

The Rev. Monsignor Splaine and the Rev. Dr. Supple were on board the Canopic, forming a part of the cardinal's suite. They were congratulated upon their honors by members of the welcoming committee.

The Rt. Rev. Mgr. M. J. Splaine of the cathedral is one of the best known Catholic clergymen in the United States. He studied at the American College in Rome and was assigned to the cathedral by Archbishop Williams immediately after his ordination. He soon became assistant chancellor. He was advanced to the chancellorship in 1907. In 1910 he was assigned as rector of the cathedral. He is one of the youngest men in ecclesiastical life holding his rank.

The Rev. Patrick J. Supple is administrator of the Church of St. John, Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury. He went to Rome in the suite of Cardinal O'Connell and is one of the best known of the younger priests of the diocese, with which he has been connected ever since his ordination. He was born at Holliston forty-seven years ago, the eldest of a large family, several of whom have won distinction in the church.

Went on Japanese Mission.

Dr. Supple was educated in the public schools of Holliston and later entered Boston College, from which he graduated with the class of '85. He studied four years at the American College in Rome. For several years he was connected with St. Peter's Church, Cambridge. Father Supple accompanied Cardinal O'Connell on his diplomatic mission to Japan and later was appointed administrator of St John's Church, Roxbury.

The Rev. Peter Ronan, P. R., first pastor and builder of St. Peter's Church, Meeting House Hill, Dorchester, has been a priest for nearly forty-four years. He was born in Meath, Ireland, September 4, 1844, and came to Lawrence when he was eight years old. He attended the schools of that city, later entering St. Joseph's Seminary at Troy, where he was ordained June 6, 1868. In 1872 he became pastor of St. Peter's Church, starting the parish in Lyceum Hall. This parish is now the largest and wealthiest in Dorchester.

The Rev. William O'Brien is pastor of the Church of the Sacred Heart, Watertown. He has been a lifelong friend of Cardinal O'Connell, having known the cardinal since the noted prelate was a little boy.

The Rev. Ambrose Roache is pastor of St. Patrick's Church, Watertown. He is widely known as an educator. His parochial school, under the direction of the Dominican teachers, is second to none in standard of excellence.

Fr. Roche was the first clergyman to establish a parochial commercial high school conducted on the same lines as a business college.

The Neponset, having on board a staff of Boston American reporters and photographers, went down the harbor to-day and met the Canopic, on which Cardinal O'Connell returned to his native shores after his visit to Rome.

AMERICAN TUG MEETS CARDINAL WITH GREETINGS

The first welcoming vessel to come in sight of the Canopic to-day was the AMERICAN tug. One of the fastest tugs in the harbor—the Neponset—had been chartered by the AMERICAN and was sent down the harbor to greet the Cardinal.

Stretched between the two masts of the tug, was a great banner, forty-five feet long, bearing the words:

WELCOME TO CARDINAL O'CONNELL.

From the peak of one of the masts floated the Papal flag, yellow and white, bearing the papal coat of arms. From the other mast floated a long blue flag, bearing the words "BOSTON AMERICAN."

The American flag floated from the stern and the American Jack from the bow of the boat. Two great banners along the side of the boat bore the words BOSTON AMERICAN. Other parts of the tug were decorated with bunting.

The AMERICAN tug, as it sped down the harbor whistling a greeting to Boston's first cardinal, was hailed as a fine example of typical AMERICAN enterprise.

The AMERICAN was the only Boston newspaper to have its own tug to go down the harbor to greet the cardinal.

A feature of to-day's reception was the souvenir edition of the AMERICAN, which was distributed among the cardinal's party and the other passengers of the Canopic on its arrival in Charlestown and to the 500 members of the committee on board the Monitor. In each copy of the souvenir edition was folded a large picture of the Cardinal.

The AMERICAN, among Boston newspapers, carried off the honors of the day—with the AMERICAN tug and the souvenir special edition which was handed to the cardinal.

RESCUES MAN WHO FELL OFF T WHARF

Cries for help, apparently coming from Commercial Wharf, attracted the attention of Patrolman Chalsson of the Hanover street station on Atlantic avenue. Rushing in that direction he found the shouts seemed to come from T wharf and found Whitman Hines, of the fishing schooner Leyo, half immersed and clinging to a pile. Some tackle was dropped to him and he was hoisted ashore. While trying to board his schooner he missed his footing in the dark and went overboard.

"YOU NEVER CAN TELL," SAYS NAT GOODWIN

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Nat Goodwin, the actor, is here to testify for the defence at the trial of George Graham Rice, B. H. Scheftels and other mining stock promoters, charged with using the mails to defraud. Goodwin denied with more or less merriment a report that he was going to marry a "society belle." Asked if he intended trying another matrimonial venture, he said: "You never can tell."

MACK PREDICTS BIG CONVENTION

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Norman E. Mack, chairman of the Democratic national committee, said that the committee on arrangements for the annual convention would meet in Baltimore, Monday morning. Indications were, he said, that the attendance at the convention, would be the largest in the history of the party, as Democrats were more confident of victory this year than ever before.

The circulation of the AMERICAN is 300,000 more than its next highest competitor and 100,000 more than all the other evening papers of Boston combined.

TAYLOR TAKES STAND AGAIN

Paul F. Taylor, the rich Worcester youth on trial for manslaughter at East Cambridge in connection with an auto collision at Marlboro, in which Patrick F. Sullivan, a Boston liquor dealer, and Frank Downes, a Boston lumber dealer, were killed, admitted on the witness stand to-day that one of the girls in his car said after the collision that they ought to turn back.

Taylor was recalled to the stand when the case was resumed before Judge McLaughlin and jury in the Middlesex Superior Criminal Court. In answer to questions he said:

"One of the girls expressed her conviction that we ought to go back, but we did not go back. I heard later that some other man was under suspicion and then I told my father and his lawyer."

The next witness, F. A. Wilkins, a Boston auto expert, testified that, in his opinion, the Downes car hit the Taylor car.

Nearly everybody in Boston reads the AMERICAN.

COMMITTEE IS DIVIDED ON TWO PRIMARY BILLS

The legislative Committee on Election Laws is divided to-day on the direct primary bills of Raymond L. Oveson, secretary of the Progressive Republican League, and Representative James F. Cavanagh of Everett.

"My bill differs from the Cavanagh bill in giving the voters control of the choice of a candidate," said Mr. Oveson to-day. "The Cavanagh bill pretends to give the voters a chance to say whom they would rather have as President, but retains the old convention system to select delegates. These delegates may do as they please and are not responsible to the voters.

"My bill gives the voters opportunity to select first, second and third choices for the Presidency, so that if the first choice should happen to be a 'favorite son,' the delegates have alternative preferences in case the favorite son cannot be nominated. It provides that the delegates shall be chosen directly by the people of the district they represent. They are answerable to their own constituents."

G. O. P. for Cavanagh Bill.

Cavanagh's bill is supposed to have whatever support the Republican organization is willing to give to any direct primary measure. The Cavanagh bill retains the old convention system under which the voters have selected the delegates to the convention and the convention has chosen the delegates to the national convention. "It still gives the bosses complete control of the situation," said Mr. Oveson to-day. Under the Cavanagh bill the voters may express their preferences, but the delegates are under no more than a moral obligation to carry out the voters' wishes. The Oveson bill instructs the delegates how to vote in the national convention.

The preferential feature of the Oveson bill constitutes a radical departure from the Massachusetts custom.

In support of his measure, Representative Cavanagh argues:

Mr. Cavanagh's Statement.

"My bill gives the people an opportunity to vote directly for the men they desire nominated by their party for President and Vice-President. The vote of the people in the primary for President and Vice-President will be but an expression of choice and will be morally binding upon the delegates afterwards chosen to the national convention. When a man becomes a candidate for delegate he is already aware of the choice of the people, and I do not believe that any man would accept the position of delegate unless he was prepared to carry out the expressed will of the people.

"It is advisable to retain the congressional and State conventions because they stimulate interest and enthusiasm and furnish an opportunity for the discussion and formulation of platforms."

What Mr. Oveson Says.

Mr. Oveson claims for his bill:

"The Cavanagh bill retains the same old machinery and methods to which we have long been accustomed, but the bill allows the voters to express their preferences for the candidates for President as a hint to the delegates which way to vote in the national convention, which hint they may or may not follow when they come to pass their ballots.

"This latter provision is a step in advance, but by itself does not get us very far. It might be of some practical use if the convention-chosen delegates had a very tender concern for the wishes of the people as thus expressed; but these convention-chosen delegates would find plenty of excuses for obeying practically the dictates of the machine.

"My bill, on the other hand, not only provides for an expression of preference by the voters, but it also gives to the people the power to choose directly their own delegates to the national convention. My bill also provides for the preferential ballot. It does not leave the delegates at sea in case the candidate for whom the Massachusetts voter expressed his first preference cannot be nominated."

The Republican organization leaders are acquiescent to the Cavanagh plan, but the Democratic leaders declare that it does not go far enough.

Artist Fisher's Ideal Beauty Is a Lost Mystery

Miss Clements, who is Harrison Fisher's model, is second on the artist's list of the ten most beautiful women in the world. He has seen the one woman who comes up to his standard of beauty, but he doesn't know her n

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Somewhere, some place, in this wide, wide world there resides the most beautiful woman of the universe, according to the Harrison Fisher standard of beauty. The famous artist has seen her; a distinct impression was made upon his mind by her loveliness, yet she passed beyond his grasp like a ship that passes in the night. He admitted that he has been searching for her for many years; but, strive as he might, he never has been able to learn her identity or to see her again.

He would give almost anything to know the name of the one woman whom he has seen and who fulfilled his ideal of feminine beauty, so he stated to-day in his studio at No. 44 West Seventy-seventh street. The reporter was in quest of a list of the ten most beautiful women, as selected by Harrison Fisher, but the list is incomplete, the name of the most beautiful of all the beautiful women being lacking. It follows:

Miss Catherine Clements, his model.
Mrs. John Jacob Astor.
Miss Katherine Force.
Mrs. Philip Lydig.
Queen Wilhelmina of Holland.
Elyse Shultz.
Dorothy Jordan.
Geraldine Farrar.
Miss Coyne, model.

Just who this woman of mystery is, the artist declared that he had racked his brain to find out. All that he knows about her is that she is a prominent society woman somewhere, and that a Grand Duke or some other titled foreigner came to this country once upon a time and tried to marry her. He isn't sure whether or not the Duke succeeded.

"She was ravishingly beautiful," he said. "First I was shown her photograph and was told that this Duke praised her as the most beautiful woman in the world. The photograph was a wonder, and later I saw the woman in reality and I thoroughly agreed with the Duke. Who she was I don't know, and everybody that I ask and mention the circumstances to seems to remember the woman, but has forgotten her name."

In his list Mr. Fisher includes four society women, a queen, two actresses and two artists' models. At first he did not care to name ten beautiful women.

"It would be foolish for me to do that," he said. "The woods are full of pretty girls, and to pick out ten and say they are the most beautiful would get me in a peck of trouble. I did that once, and I brought trouble by the carload. Among that list were several society girls. They raised a rumpus for giving their names for publication. Some of them were girls in poorer circumstances, whom I had met and found to be beautiful."

COLONEL GREEN TELLS OF IDEAL

SAN FRANCISCO, Jan. 31.—Edward Howland Robinson Green of Terrel, Texas, son of Hetty Green, banker and bachelor, has arrived here from the East. Colonel Green has personally heralded himself as the great hope of the leap year girl, and admits he has his big heart's strings well attuned for Cupid's flashes.

She is to be a Western girl, meaning that if the leap year finds Colonel Green with his matrimonial prize she will have come out of the West, free from what the colonel terms the follies of Eastern social life—a real type of Western womanhood.

A girl with a "slashing head," well poised on a good pair of shoulders, a broad, straight forehead, eyes well separated, brown hair and rugged countenance—a countenance that is not worn by social cares.

Won't Wed a Clothes Horse.

"I'm going to marry a woman, not a clothes horse," are Colonel Green's own words. No tangled corset strings for him. No continuous seasons of social functions, late suppers and the like. He wants a wife who can carefully mother a family of children.

Colonel Green is accompanied by Charles L. Pierson, an attorney of New York, and his secretary, W. H. Marshall.

"I'm here to look over conditions," declared Colonel Green in response to a query.

"Financial or matrimonial?" ventured his interviewer.

"New York women do not seem to know the real meaning of marriage. They marry for a home and live out of it.

"Children are the last thing they want. They are the very last word of the useless. If they can have beautiful clothes and look fashionable they do not worry about domestic accomplishments.

"None of them know how to cook and sew, and, holy horrors, they would deny that their good old homely grandmothers did wash clothes, too.

"If a fashionable New York woman went up Fifth avenue with a ring in her nose the jewelers could not finish nose rings fast enough to supply the demand.

"They want to peacock about restaurants and theatres for the purpose of being seen by men who are not their husbands."

How to Bring Up Children.

Colonel Green's idea of a wholesome woman is that her education should be more along domestic lines, and he qualifies it in saying:

"Women should marry with the idea of having children and caring for a home.

"Children should be brought up like chickens and healthy pups—where there is grass and plenty of dirt.

"And there is plenty of grass and dirt in the West," added the Colonel. He laughed at the suggestion that the Leap Year might seal his fate.

"It may," said he—"I'm but human. If I should run across a woman I thought fulfilled my ideas, I'd marry her."

MANCHUS YIELD TO THE REBELS

PEKIN, Jan. 31.—The Dowager Empress to-day notified the cabinet that the imperial family has agreed to make terms with the Chinese rebels to secure peace. The final ultimatum of the republicans demanded the abdication of the Manchu dynasty as the sole means of ending the civil war, and the decree of abdications was drawn up to-day. Itemizing several conditions for which republican guarantees are demanded.

YOUR GRAY HAIRS QUICKLY VANISH; A HARMLESS REMEDY RESTORES COLOR

A feeling of sadness accompanies the discovery of the first gray hairs, which unfortunately are looked upon as heralds of advancing age. Gray hair, however handsome it may be, makes a person look old. We all know the advantages of being young. Aside from the good impression a youthful appearance makes on others, simply knowing that you are "looking fit" gives one courage to undertake and accomplish things. So why suffer the handicap of looking old on account of gray hairs, when a simple remedy will give your hair youthful color and beauty in a few days' time?

Most people know that common garden sage acts as a color restorer and scalp tonic as well. Our grandmothers used a "Sage Tea" for keeping their hair dark, soft and luxuriant. In Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy we have an ideal preparation of Sage, combined with Sulphur and other valuable remedies for dandruff, itching scalp and thin, weak hair that is split at the ends or constantly coming out. A few applications of this valuable remedy will bring back the color, and in a short time it will remove every trace of dandruff and greatly improve the growth and appearance of the hair.

Get a fifty cent bottle from your druggist today, and notice the difference in your hair after a few days' treatment. All druggists sell it, under guarantee that the money will be refunded if the remedy is not exactly as represented.

WHY DELANEY REFUSED RAISE

By ELIZABETH ELLIOTT.

"I charge thee, fling away ambition:
By that sin fell the angels."

That is the very thing that one, Joseph A. Delaney, has had the courage to do—fling away ambition!

That which every other policeman in Greater Boston is constantly striving to attain—appointment as sergeant—is the very position Mr. Delaney refuses to accept.

Mr. Delaney on one day was appointed by Police Commissioner O'Meara and the day following was begging the Commissioner to allow him to return to his old rank and his old beat. It is said that this is the first time in the history of the Boston Police Department that a man promoted has refused the rank and sought reduction.

"He must be crazy," I heard one man say yesterday, so I journeyed out to Forest Hills to see just what the trouble could possibly be. Forest Hills was snow-bound, but after being transformed into a temporary snowplow I gradually made my way to the comfy little home of the Delaneys' on Hyde Park avenue, Forest Hills, where all was comfort and coziness.

The Real Reason.

The man who refused to let ambition spoil his happy family life was sleeping. A sweet-faced woman with beautiful brown eyes and the kindliest of smiles opened the door and informed me that she was Mrs. Delaney.

A bright-faced, chubby little girl scampered in to see what was doing. I stated my case as clearly as possible for one so short of breath after the journey through the snow and then sat and chatted.

"There are several reasons why Mr. Delaney would prefer to remain in his old position. It's true that he would dislike very much being put over the other officers and to be compelled to report any of them. It's also true that he wishes to be more with his family—which, had he accepted the position would be impossible, but the real reason, I'm sure, is our little six-year-old son, who refuses to go to sleep until his father has returned home.

Happiness Above All.

"Where is papa? What keeps him so late? Do you suppose the captain won't let him come home?" Many and many a time his father has come in quietly and heard him asking these questions and I feel sure that that is the reason—or at least, one of the strongest ones, why he refused the promotion.

"We have three sons and one daughter. The youngest son has been quite ill. He thinks there's no one like his father and, as I said before, refuses to sleep before he has come in.

"Being contented is half the battle in life and $200 more or less won't make such a very great amount of difference. Night work is hard and trying and if he should lose his health $200 wouldn't make up for it."

"But it does seem strange," I insisted, "that when so many men are striving to get ahead and to become sergeants that he should refuse the appointment?"

"Yes, but there are so many other things that cost so much more than that. I think most of us are seeking happiness and if it isn't found in a certain line, why bother?"

No Ambition to Be a Boss.

Mr. Delaney has been a policeman since July 2, 1890. He was born in Forest Hills and has lived there all his life. He never wanted to be a sergeant. In his old route he was contented—so why change? He had a day route and all his interests were centered about his wife and four children.

Aside from the fact that the work of sergeant would take him away from his family, he never had any ambition to be a "boss."

It was last January that Captain Joseph A. Harriman of Division 13 told Mr. Delaney that he had named him as one of the three men from that division who might take an examination for sergeant. Delaney thanked him, but wasn't over-enthusiastic.

Of the sixteen men who were examined Delaney had the poorest percentage. He had made no special study for the test as he didn't care to succeed. He was selected, however, in preference to six other men who stood ahead of him on the Civil Service eligible list because of his excellent record.

And when the order was read bringing to him what to others would have meant the best of news, he was most indifferent.

He later went to Commissioner O'Meara and told him that though he had been selected he would prefer to be back on his old duty, and his reasons were such excellent ones that he was allowed to resign as a sergeant and return to his old beat.

JOSEPH DELANEY, WHO REFUSED A POLICE PROMOTION

J. F. DELANEY

Officer Delaney was appointed a sergeant by Commissioner O'Meara recently but refused to accept the promotion preferring his home and children to an increase in salary and a higher position.

MAETERLINCK SINGS FAREWELL

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

Georgette Leblanc Maeterlinck made her farewell appearance at the Boston Opera House last night in "Pelleas et Melisande." This time it was the dramatic version with the music by Gabriel Faure, and she was assisted by several prominent French actresses, various members of the opera company, and last, but not least, a minute person who played little Yniold.

He was down on the bill as Shery, but his full name is Sheridan Russell, and he is the nine-year-old son of Director Henry Russell.

"Pelleas et Melisande," without the music, is a justification of Debussy's music. Aimless, purposeless and vague, as is the opera, the play is more so. Debussy's music is in a way a bridge between the cold, sober every day world and the fanciful senseless persons of the play.

The music of Gabriel Faure, beautiful and poetic as it is, does not create this dream atmosphere and the thoughts of the characters are less idiotic when chanted than when spoken.

There is no question of the beauty of the language of Maeterlinck, although it is lost upon English speaking audiences. Yet it is amazing that a drama which has no action, which requires seventeen scenes, and whose characters have no intelligence and few morals, should have survived and have attracted the attention of composers like Faure and Debussy.

The unique and expensive operatic setting was used for the drama and did much to content the audience. Three more scenes were used than in the opera, but they harmonized with the ensemble.

The drama differs in few respects from the opera. Debussy clothed the lines of Maeterlinck in tone without the intervention of a librettist.

The action of Madame Maeterlinck also differs little from her operatic interpretation. Her speaking voice is much more charming and effective than her singing.

Jean Dorozat, a large and deep voiced French "legit," makes an admirable Golaud. Rene Maupre, the Pelleas, looked and acted like an undertaker whose business was poor, and succeeded in being even more idiotic than Melisande.

The tiny Russell boy was very pleasant, and displayed much dramatic ability. The others in the cast were adequate.

The music of Faure is sympathetic and melodious. There is too little of it. There was a very small audience, but fashionable and enthusiastic.

FATE HANGS ON LOVE LETTERS

NEWARK, N. J., Jan. 31.—Allison MacFarland, charged with the murder of his wife Evelyn in October, 1911, by placing cyanide of potassium where she would mistake it for medicine, will probably know his fate this afternoon. At the opening of court this morning Chief Justice Gummere delivered his charge to the jury. The courtroom was crowded with lawyers and spectators. In his charge Judge Gummere reviewed the evidence in the case and outlined the law. The charge was regarded as impartial by both sides.

Justice Gummere finished his charge to the jury in less than one hour, and the case went to the jury at 10:30 o'clock.

It was the general belief that MacFarland's life depended on the love letters he wrote to Miss Florence Bromley of Philadelphia, for love of whom, the State claims, he killed his wife. The trial has broken all records for speed, having been in progress only three days.

Letters in the Case.

Letters containing what an attorney called "passages from Boccacio," and which passed between MacFarland and the girl who is the "other woman" in the case, figured prominently in the evidence. MacFarland addressed the girl as "Dearest Bunny," and she used this name in signing her letters to him.

Mr. and Mrs. George A. Crockett of Rockland, Me., parents-in-law of the defendant, testified for the prosecution. Their testimony was to the point that the married life of the MacFarlands was, so far as they had heard during their daughter's life, perfectly congenial.

Attorney Mott, the prosecutor, then read a letter from MacFarland to Florence Bromley of Philadelphia, written October 21 from the police station where he was locked up. It was three days after his wife had been found dead, poisoned by cyanide of potassium.

In the summing up Mr. Mott said this letter showed how little Mrs. MacFarland's death had affected her imprisoned husband.

Bottles as Exhibits.

Mr. Mott took from the table one of several empty bottles found in the medicine chest at the MacFarland home. He waved it toward the defendant and exclaimed:

"He says he put the cyanide in the bromide bottle because he wanted a bottle that size. Why didn't he use this bottle, or that one, or that one, I'd like to know?"

Miss Bromley, he said, expressed affection for six-year-old Robert MacFarland and remarked: "I ought to have been his mother." To show that the defendant had promised to marry the girl, the prosecutor read a letter from her to MacFarland written September 28, 1911. In part it was:

> Your blessed letter came this morning. I know, as you say, you are coming running to me, and you are soon to make me happy. Ever since your last letter I have sung and laughed with joy. There is something in it that makes me know you will soon be mine. Heart of mine, our golden future is just beyond; our lonely journey is almost over.

This letter was signed "Bunny."

"The first time they spoke definitely of getting married," continued Mr. Mott, "was in April, 1911. January 23, 1911, she wrote:

"Do the Job in Maine."

"'Why can't you go up to Maine and do the job there?' April 8, 1911, she wrote, 'I don't like the attitude of your wife, and I wish you'd give her a jolt.'

"Her birthday, as the letters will show, is September 24. In May, 1911, she wrote him: 'I'll wait, but I must have you for my birthday present.' He wrote her on the 24th of that month that he was looking for rooms. She wrote him that if he didn't marry her by October she'd kill herself. In June she wrote saying that she would meet him in New York, and she also referred to marriage. In answer he sent her stockings, gloves and other things.

"She was a pretty bad girl, but she told him she would not be his affinity. She insisted on marriage and said she would never go to a home of his except as his lawful wife. She told him in one letter she hated his wife and didn't want him even to pretend that he loved Mrs. MacFarland. In August he wrote her, saying he had arranged a cozy nest for the girl and himself at Ampere, N. J. He followed this on September 4 by writing that he was going to start something within a week.

"He started something within a week. It was about that time he stole from his employers the cyanide from taking which his wife died."

A letter written by Miss Bromley on July 11, 1911, was read. The letter read:

> It was yesterday afternoon the bolt fell. Oh, the way they talked about me. I cannot remember it all at once. They said so much. They called me a horrible name. You know what I mean. They said horrible things about you trying to break me away. But never fear, dear love, I believe nothing anyone says about you. I know you too well for that. I love you and trust you forever and forever my precious one.
> They said you were a fool and had other affairs with other girls such as you are having with me. They said you had no intention of getting a divorce if you wanted to.

Defence Sums Up.

Mr. McDermitt, summing up, said the case against his client consisted of naught but conjectures.

"Why doesn't the prosecutor produce the Bromley girl? Why are we called upon to discuss the defendant's relations with her? She is not an issue, the letters are not an issue. Is love for her a new proposition?

"Is this the first time you've been called on to hear the story of a man and two women? You are not trying this man on the charge that he led a dual life; you are not to find him guilty of murder just because he received from a girl letters containing quotations from Boccaccio and other striking samples of literary art."

A letter from MacFarland written to Miss Bromley while he was detained at the Fifth Precinct station, and dated three days after his wife's death, was as follows:

> Dearest Bunny—Received your three letters, but none since my last. I am held for causing the death of my wife, but am not worrying about it as, of course, it is preposterous and will come out right in the end, as you know my lady had agreed to everything, and while she might have taken her life purposely, I think she did it by error. Please do not be discouraged about it, dearest. Forget all about it for the present. It is a terrible mess, but you, dear, are in no way responsible and I do not feel that I am to blame in the matter. My knowledge of innocence and your love will keep me up.
> Remember, above all things, dearest, do not worry over it. What is to be will be, and at the worst we only die. Keep close to me on your wireless. Remember, I think of you always. It seems such a pity when our affairs were going so smoothly. It will be two weeks or so before anything more happens. I will write you if you want me to, but the letters are read. Everybody knows about us, but there is nothing getting outside. Write care of District Attorney's office, Newark, or don't write—as you think best. I know you are there, even if you don't write. With all my love, AL.
> P. S.—I wrote two letters and card. Didn't you get them? I think one of your letters was dated since.

JUDGE DEWEY CALLED INSANE

Judge Henry Sweetser Dewey, once one of the foremost men in Massachusetts public life, but whose eccentricities have amazed the courts for the past few years, was to-day taken into custody at the courthouse on papers alleging that he is insane and was conveyed to Pierce Farm, Dorchester, where he was placed in the psycopathic ward for observation.

Judge Dewey resisted the efforts of W. K. Coburn, a constable of the Probate Court, and Charles Gainor, institution registrar, to take him from the courthouse. The two officers were backed by several police inspectors, however, and the judge was dragged into a taxicab, which hustled him to Pierce Farm.

Judge Dewey's eccentricities have heretofore astonished judges, lawyers and court attendants, but until last week they were within reasonable bounds, though ludicrous at times. Last week, however, he appeared in court in the full uniform of a brigadier-general, with side arms, boots and spurs, to plead the case of a client charged with carrying a concealed weapon.

At that time, District-Attorney Pelletier succeeded in inducing him to leave the court room. After that it was decided to detain Judge Dewey upon his next appearance in court. Gainor filed the complaint and Judge Grant signed the papers.

To-day when Judge Dewey walked into court where Assistant District Attorney Lavelle was pleading the Boldue case and spoke to John Feeney of counsel for the defense, an attendant notified Inspector Cronin at police headquarters. Cronin hurried to the District Attorney's office, where he found Dewey.

Coburn and Gainor then served the papers.

Judge Dewey demanded the documents. They were handed to him.

"So you're commissioned to detain me," said Dewey.

"Yes I'm sorry," said Gainor.

"Oh, you don't have to be sorry for me," replied the judge. "I need no sympathy. So, I'm insane, am I? You say I'm insane?"

"No," said Gainor, "I simply alleged that there was cause to believe that you were insane."

In four of the operations the vermiform appendix was removed, after which an antiseptic solution was injected through the appendix into the large intestine."

It is now announced that the volume will be published with the space formerly occupied by those stanzas left blank. PETERSBURG, Jan. 31.—By order of the Emperor and the Holy Synod, the recalcitrant Bishop Hermogenes has been dismissed from his diocese and exiled to a monastery for the open and persistent insubordination in refusing to return home in spite of reiterated imperial and synodal orders. Simultaneously the reactionary priest, Heliodorus, the Abbot of Tsaritsyn, has been exiled to a remote monastery for championing the cause of Hermogenes. The disgrace of Hermogenes and Heliodorus, is ascribed to antagonism on the part of Gregory Rasputin, reputed to be a holy man and mystic who is wielding enormous influence at the court. The reigning Empress is a devotee of Rasputin.

DIX WILL PASS ON BRANDT CASE

ALBANY, Jan. 31.—Governor Dix will decide whether or not attorneys for Mortimer L. Schiff shall have access to the report filed by District Attorney Whitman recommending the release from Clinton Prison of Folke Engelbrecht Brandt, former servant at the Schiff home.

This was decided when Howard S. Gans, Mr. Schiff's personal counsel, convinced Seymour Van Santvoord, the Governor's legal adviser, that in order to prove Brandt unworthy of executive clemency it would be necessary for the Schiff family to answer the findings on which Mr. Whitman recommends freedom for Brandt.

Lawyer Gans Is Pleased.

Utmost satisfaction was expressed by Mr. Gans over the plan to have Governor Dix assume the responsibility of settling all points at issue. Mr. Gans believes that after the Governor has read Mr. Whitman's report he will decide that, in all fairness, the Schiff family should be permitted to file an answer.

Brandt's assertion that he pleaded guilty to burglary in order to protect the honor of a woman will be set forth in Mr. Whitman's brief, and explanation of what the Schiff lawyers say are the actual facts will be laid side by side for the Governor to consider.

When Mr. Gans arrived at the Executive Chamber at noon today he was prepared to submit a statement calculated to prove that Brandt's allegations of having been railroaded to prison are without foundation, and that his crime was so serious his release at this time would be a menace to the public.

Politics Seen in the Case.

Some of the incidents related by Mr. Gans suggested the theory that a movement to free Brandt is not founded entirely upon sympathy for him, and that politics may enter largely into the motives that actuate those who claim to be Brandt's friends. Some of the statements made by Mr. Gans were of such an extraordinary nature that Mr. Van Santvoord felt it would be best for Governor Dix himself to judge them.

After the interview Mr. Van Santvoord said:

"The Governor's advisers took the position that, under existing circumstances, it was not a proper time to consider any statement on the part of Mr. Schiff's representative.

"At the time of Mr. Gans' arrival there had been received only the application of the convict and the report of District Attorney Whitman, which latter was filed late last night and had not yet been fully read.

Judge's Report Not Yet Read.

"The report of Judge Rosalsky, completing the record, was filed shortly after the arrival of Mr. Gans and has not yet been opened.

"The Governor has not seen either of these reports and his advisers believe and decide that the reports should not be submitted for examination until they have first been actually presented to the Governor. Mr. Gans heartily concurred in this conclusion."

It will probably be a week or more before Governor Dix will be able to inspect the papers.

Cardinal Voices Pope's Blessing

Responding to the address of welcome made by Mayor Fitzgerald to Cardinal O'Connell on board the Canopic to-day, the cardinal said:

"I wish to express my gratitude at the welcome extended to me from so many who represent the best citizenship, patriotism and commercial supremacy of the city of Boston.

"I bring with me the blessing of the Holy Father not only to the Catholic people of New England but to those who are not Catholics.

"I am delighted beyond expression at returning to Boston, of whose citizenship I am proud, and to my native land by birthright.

"I give the blessing of the Pope to all of my own flock and those who are not Catholics."

$300,000 FIRE IN ATTLEBORO

ATTLEBORO, Jan. 31.—A runaway automobile caused a three-alarm fire which destroyed the Bates Opera House block here early to-day at a loss of $300,000.

The automobile, left standing in front of the block, suddenly started of its own accord, headed for the block, crashed through a plate-glass window of Burrill's dry goods store, exploded and set fire to the store and building.

F. W. Weaver, George L. Shepardson, Ervin Sweet, Louis H. Cooper and their families, with Stephen Garner and Representative Edward A. Sweeney, lodgers, were driven out by smoke and flames, hardly having time to dress. Groping their way down the smoke-choked stairway the occupants staggered out into the street, blinded and frightened, especially the women.

The fire threatened the Gifford block adjoining and was kept from sweeping the North Main street business section only by desperate efforts of the entire fire fighting force of the town. At one time it was thought that help would be necessary from surrounding towns, but the local department handled the job alone.

DO YOU WANT A GOOD ATLAS?

When the subject of an Atlas is broached, most of us at once think of a number of maps with portions of each printed in different colors, with thousands of little black dots and thin lines showing a multitude of towns, cities, villages and hamlets, and rivers and railroads and mountains.

We find it difficult in referring to such an atlas to find a city or town in some far-off country, or even in our own, where something out of the ordinary has happened to attract the attention of the world. And after straining our eyes, if we succeed in finding this particular spot on the face of the globe, and we want to get a description of the place, we must "hike" to the nearest public library and spend much time in pouring over numerous catalogues and books before we get the desired information.

All this bother may be obviated, however, if you clip the coupon printed in the AMERICAN and secure the New Census Atlas of the World. This is one of the three books offered by the AMERICAN to its readers. It is a comprehensive pictorial and descriptive atlas and census of the world. It contains, besides maps of the world, printed in colors, engravings of the principal buildings and points of interest in the capitals of the world, as well as census figures, and descriptive information of all the leading cities of the world, all of which may be gathered at a glance.

Clip your coupon and get it.

The Story of Welsbach Service

Second:—Durability

The fabric of Welsbach mantles is woven in our own factory—and is purified in three separate chemical baths. Finally it is rinsed in a bath of distilled water. Ten thousand gallons of distilled water are used in this process each day, and when it is finished the mantle webbing is purer than the absorbent cotton used by surgeons.

As a result of this extreme care the Welsbach mantle is produced without flaws and imperfections—a mantle that you can rely upon for strength and durability.

FIN. COM. HEARS OF FIRE TRAPS

The Finance Commission is expected to report within a few days the result of its investigation of the work of Building Commissioner Everett, which followed the disclosures of conditions at the Revere House after it was destroyed by fire. The attention of the commission has been called to numerous cases of laxity in investigating buildings. The commission held a meeting yesterday to consider Mr. Everett's case.

One of the cases called to the attention of the commission was the Forest Hills Hotel in Hyde Park avenue, Forest Hills. This building is three stories high, all of wood. It has a frontage of 120 feet and accommodates about 100 persons, none of whom is a transient guest. It is triangular in shape and has a wooden stairway in each corner. Outside, in the rear, is a series of balconies ten feet square, connected by wooden open stairs.

Another case is the Hotel Navarre at No. 455 Columbus avenue. The building is five stories high, of brick, and has no fire escapes. One set of stairs is the only means of exit. The elevator is back of these stairs, so that a fire that closed the use of one would act similarly upon the other.

The attention of the commission has also been called to the condition of scores of buildings in the Columbus avenue and Tremont street sections. These buildings are usually from three to five stories in height and are of the old-fashioned type. As a rule they have no fire escapes. The typical building has a frontage of about twenty feet, and there is no connection between buildings. There is usually a small stairway and frequently a wooden ladder on the top floor, which can be used as a means of egress to the roof.

Spirits for Rheumatism

The use of spirits in the treatment of rheumatism has proved an innovation among the medical profession. When mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly it is said to be an almost infallible cure for rheumatism and backache. Here is the formula: "From your druggist get one ounce of Toris compound (in original sealed package) and one ounce of syrup of Sarsaparilla compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Shake the bottle and take a tablespoonful before each meal and at bedtime." Results come immediately. If your druggist does not have Toris compound in stock he will get it in a few hours from his wholesale house. Don't be influenced to take some patent medicine instead of this. Insist on having the genuine Toris compound in the original one ounce sealed yellow package.

FACTS IN HARVEY-WILSON DISPUTE

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Following is a history of the Governor Wilson-Colonel Harvey dispute:

December 7—Governor Wilson and Colonel Harvey met in the afternoon in Colonel Watterson's rooms in the Manhattan Club by invitation of Colonel Watterson. The two succeeding issues of Harper's Weekly on sale December 14 and December 21 contained no mention of Colonel Wilson's name.

December 21—Governor Wilson wrote to Colonel Harvey from the University Club. Colonel Harvey left New York on that day for Berryville, Va., where he remained as the guest of Mr. Paul Kelley during the holidays. He received Governor Wilson's letter upon his return on January 2, and replied on January 4.

January 5—The morning newspapers printed rumors of a break between Governor Wilson and Colonel Harvey. The evening newspapers published the following Associated Press dispatch:

TRENTON, N. J., Jan. 31.—Governor Woodrow Wilson of New Jersey in an authorized interview to-day said that so far as his influence went the speculations contained in newspaper dispatches that a breach had come between Colonel Harvey of New York and himself, were entirely without foundation.

"My attention," he said, "has of course been drawn to the fact that the last two numbers of Harper's Weekly have made no mention of my name, but this is certainly not due to any breach of any kind between Colonel Harvey and myself. Colonel Harvey runs the weekly entirely on his own judgment."

January 7.—The following dispatch from Trenton appeared in the Sun:

Wilson Denied Break.

TRENTON, Jan. 6.—Governor Wilson disclaimed to-day that he was in any way responsible for the recent change of front on the part of Harper's Weekly, which for two successive issues has ignored, instead of advocated his presidential candidacy. He made a positive statement that there had been no breach in the friendly relations between Colonel Harvey and himself and that he knew of nothing which could have given rise to such a report.

When informed by a Sun correspondent that it had been definitely reported that at a recent meeting he had said in the presence of Colonel Harvey that the advocacy of Harper's Weekly at this time was damaging to his presidential aspirations, the Governor specifically denied the truth of the report.

"When I said that there had been a breach between Colonel Harvey and myself I meant it literally," he added. "There is no foundation whatever for the story, as I never made any such remark as that which you say has been attributed to me."

The Governor also said that he failed to recall the occasion which could have given rise to such an impression.

January 11—Governor Wilson wrote a second letter to Colonel Harvey from the Hotel Astor to which Colonel Harvey replied on January 16, inclosing an advance proof sheet of the editorial announcement subsequently published in Harper's Weekly.

January 18—Colonel Henry Watterson issued a statement concerning the interview on December 7.

January 24—Mr. Bryan issued a statement approving Governor Wilson's course in breaking with Colonel Harvey, closing as follows:

Bryan's Statement.

"It must pain Governor Wilson to break with old friends, but the breaks must necessarily follow unless he turns back or they go forward. 'A man is known by the company he keeps,' and he cannot keep company with those going in opposite directions.

"Governor Wilson must prepare himself for other desertions—they will distress him, but there is abundant consolation in the consciousness of duty done.

"It should matter little to him whether he reaches the White House or not. That depends on circumstances which he can but partially control. The joy that comes from the faithful rendition of service surpasses any satisfaction of political ambition—a joy that makes one strong enough to endure even the severest of strains—namely, the breaking of the bonds of friendship."

January 24—Senator Tillman in an interview declared:

"Instead of Wilson showing a lack of gratitude to Harvey, as we have been led to suppose, he saw through the scheme, measured Harvey and Watterson correctly, and refused to be lassoed and tied to Thomas Ryan. This fact should and will make him stronger with the masses of the people."

January 25—Colonel Watterson issued a second statement declaring the Tillman story "a lie made out of whole cloth." Governor Wilson was interviewed that evening and was reported by the Sun as follows:

"Will you take this opportunity to clear up the Harvey-Watterson controversy, Governor Wilson?

"Does it need any further clearing up?" was all he would say.

The Herald published the following: This was all Governor Wilson would say on this subject, but with equal promptness he flatly denied a report from Washington in an evening newspaper that he had written a letter of conciliation to Colonel George Harvey to correct what were described as public misinterpretations of his purpose in declining the further support of Harper's Weekly.

"I have had no correspondence with Colonel Harvey since that which was made public in connection with Harper's Weekly presentation of my name as a presidential candidate," he said. "I have not written to Colonel Harvey since then, and he has not written to me."

January 29 Colonel Watterson gave out a statement taking issue with Governor Wilson.

These letters confirm Colonel Watterson's description of Governor Wilson's attitude at the interview. They establish the accuracy of the Harper's Weekly editorial announcement.

Containing no illusion whatever to Mr. Ryan, they confirm Colonel Watterson's assertion that the Ryan matter had absolutely nothing to do with the break between Governor Wilson and Colonel Harvey.

Where do they leave Mr. Bryan and Senator Tillman who applauded Governor Wilson for spurning Colonel Harvey's support?

The statement in Colonel Harvey's letter of January 4 that it was understood at the time of the interview (December 7) that Harper's Weekly was to cease advocating Governor Wilson's nomination, was not contradicted by Governor Wilson in his response of January 11.

Question of Veracity.

In his letter of January 11, Governor Wilson regrets having placed Colonel Harvey in a false and embarrassing position, but subsequently made no effort to relieve Colonel Harvey of such embarrassment.

On the contrary, according to Colonel Watterson, his accredited representatives industriously circulated reports that the break was due to Governor Wilson's indignant refusal to accept money from Mr. Ryan. Upon these assertions Mr. Bryan and Senator Tillman based their approval of Governor Wilson's action.

Exactly fourteen days elapsed after the interview before Governor Wilson wrote his first letter of apology to Colonel Harvey. In this letter, while expressing the hope that Colonel Harvey's support "might be continued," he doesn't withdraw his expression of opinion that such support was harmful to his candidacy. Meanwhile Harper's Weekly had taken down Governor Wilson's name and ceased to advocate his nomination. To have resumed such advocacy would have put Harper's Weekly at the beck and call of a candidate.

Governor Wilson refers to his desire, which he was unable to gratify of seeing Colonel Harvey in Washington. Colonel Harvey was in his rooms in the same hotel with Governor Wilson the entire afternoon.

Questions of Governor Wilson's veracity are settled by comparing his published statements with the statements contained in his letters.

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The stormy weather is being taken advantage of by the motor truck dealers of this city. No better opportunity is afforded them to dispose of their respective power vehicles than snowy and squally weather.

Then it is that they point with pride to the great strides which have been made in this branch of the industry.

Daily may be seen the great exemplification of the superiority of the motor driven over the horse-drawn vehicle. On the slippery pavements the horse is at a great disadvantage, while on the other hand the truck ploughs along regardless of existing weather conditions.

Many of the larger commercial houses have had the advantages of the motor vehicles brought forcefully home to them. Horses falling on the ice-covered and treacherous snow-covered streets are not only liable to seriously injure themselves, but the breaking of shafts and destroying of harness equipment is a matter which adds considerably to the cost and upkeep of horse-drawn vehicles.

Then again, aside from the fact that motors mean greater speed and reliability, the humanitarian point of view is all in favor of giving the horse a rest.

The most forcible illustration of the enormous facilities of the Buick Motor Company is evidenced by the number of large orders handled by the company the past two weeks.

On January 15 an order was received from the Nebraska-Buick Auto Company, Lincoln, Nebraska, for ninety autos. On January 3, the Howard Automobile Company of San Francisco, ordered 220 cars. On January 23, the Pence Automobile Company of Minneapolis, Minn., placed an order for 547 autos.

These were arranged in four trainloads: the first containing thirty-six carloads, or 108 automobiles, went forward the 25th. The next a train of fifty carloads, or 150 automobiles will leave the factory on the 29th.

The next or third train of equal size is scheduled for shipment February 5, and the fourth train, made up of 138 automobiles, which will be shipped in forty-six carloads, will be shipped from the factory on the 10th of February.

This record has never been equalled or even approached by any other manufacturer of automobiles in the world, and will probably stand as a record for a long time.

In addition to these, shipments of regular business and the hundreds of direct carloads to customers have also been taken care of.

STUDENT PLEA FOR STRIKERS

LAWRENCE, Jan. 31.—David Williams, a graduate student of the Harvard Divinity School and a member of the Harvard Socialist Club, came into the strikers' meeting to-day unannounced and in a speech urged the strikers to fight to a finish now that their leader had been taken from them.

Williams was in the hall when Joseph Bardoett, acting in the place of Ettor, called the 500 strikers to order. Coolly walking through the crowd to the platform, he whispered to Mr. Bardoett and then began to speak. His speech created much enthusiasm. Williams brought two subscriptions to the strikers' fund, but the amount was not given out.

Williams said:

"I would like to say to you men that I am a Harvard man and I am here as a man in sympathy with your case. I want to assist you and our club wants to assist you. Now that your leader has been taken from you, you must stick together and fight to a finish and I am here to give you any assistance that I can.

"This is a fight between capital on one side and justice on the other. It is a hard fight for you. All fights are hard when capital is an opponent. You must win this fight or your conditions will be worse than ever before.

"The militia was sent here because they said that the strikers used their arms. They did use their own arms, but they did not resort to bayonets. Now just remain as you are. Keep out of trouble. Fight hard and there is no doubt but you will get just what you have demanded."

At the close of the speech, Williams was cheered. The big crowd stood up and cheered as he left the hall as quietly as he came.

Resolutions of sympathy were offered for the woman shot in the riot of Monday night.

GOVERNOR ODDIE OF NEVADA TO MARRY

CARSON CITY, Nev., Jan. 31.—Governor Tasker L. Oddie is to be married in a few days to Mrs. Dale Hartley Baker of Oakland, Cal. She is the widow of the late Rives Baker and is a sister-in-law of Cleveland H. Baker, Attorney-General of Nevada. Governor Oddie is about forty years old.

PHELPS FUND GROWS DAILY

The fund which is being raised by the AMERICAN and other Boston newspapers for the relief of the family of Silas N. Phelps has reached $1,956.95. While this amount is more than sufficient to satisfy the needs of the family at present, the future is yet to be looked after, for the children are all young and it will be several years before they are out of school and self supporting.

Persons living in the western part of the State have become interested in the little family and most of the latest subscriptions have been received from that section. Even the children are rising to the occasion. One girl raised $10 among persons living in her neighborhood, and another contributed twenty-five cents out of her own savings.

LISBON MOBS FIGHT TROOPS

LISBON (via Badajos, Spanish frontier), Jan. 31.—Fighting as furious as that which occurred during the overthrow of the monarchy has been going on here between republican soldiers and armed strikers for thirty-six hours. The strikers are using dynamite and have made threats to blow up all the government buildings and kill the President of the republic. As a result of these threats the city has been placed under martial law and a heavy guard is being maintained around all of the public buildings.

More than 200 arrests have been made, the prisoners being confined on the warship Adamastor in the Tagus River. Scores of women, wives and daughters of the strikers are fighting against the soldiers.

It is reported from Molta that a number of women were killed there. They were on the firing line in a battle between mobs and troops.

The government is maintaining a strict censorship, and this dispatch was sent by courier to the Spanish frontier in order to circumvent official notice.

Cavalry are patrolling the streets, and infantry and artillery are camped in all of the parks.

ETTOR BEFORE LAWRENCE COURT IN MILL STRIKE DEATH HEARING

the strikers, made an urgent plea for bail on the ground that Ettor was two miles away from the riot in which the Lapizzo woman was killed, also that a previous warrant against Ettor charged him only with inciting to riot. Judge Chandler said no other warrant was applied for but the one charging accessory to murder and that he found no reason to make exception in these cases to the rule that principals or accessories in murder charges cannot be bailed.

Ettor and Giovannitti were taken to Lawrence jail, where they will be held till their continued hearing comes up February 9.

Another feature to-day was the arrest of Angelo Rocco, twenty-seven years old, but a member of the junior class in Lawrence High School, on a charge of inciting a riot on Monday, January 15. Rocco is a member of the "Inside Committee of Six," which, the police say, carries out the general strike movements under Ettor's direction. Rocco was locked up by order of City Marshal O'Sullivan while he was at the police station at 9:30 demanding to see Ettor.

Strikers Are Incensed.

When the news of the holding of Ettor and Giovannitti without bail was brought to strike headquarters on Common street sixty strikers broke into violent outburst. They were deeply angered when they realized that they would be deprived of the leadership of Ettor for ten days at least.

Before he was arraigned in court Ettor sent word to Colonel E. Leroy Sweetser, in command of the militia, to call off the funeral parade planned in honor of Annie Lapizzo. Ettor said he feared that there would be an outbreak. Colonel Sweetser immediately complied with Ettor's request.

Militia guarded all entrances to the courtroom when Ettor and Giovannitti were arraigned. Only those having actual business were admitted, but, with the newspapermen, counsel for various prisoners, other lawyers interested in the case, the police and others, there were enough to fill the courtroom.

Ettor and Giovannitti sat side by side on a bench, with a few defendants in minor cases ranged near them. They rose when their names were called. The warrant was read by Clerk Mahoney. The warrant against Ettor, similar to the one on which Giovannitti was arrested, was as follows:

The Warrant.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.

SS. To the justice of the police court of Lawrence, in the County of Essex, Commonwealth of Massachusetts, William H. Proctor, in behalf of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, on oath complains that a certain person whose name is not known to the complainant, of Lawrence, in said county, on the twenty-ninth day of January, in the year of our Lord 1912, with force and arms at Lawrence, in said county, did assault and beat one Anna Lo Pezzi with a loaded revolver, with intent to kill and murder her, the said Anna Lo Pezzi, and by such assault did murder her, and so the complainant says that the said person, whose name is not known, as aforesaid, is guilty of murder in the first degree.

And the complainant further says that before said murder was committed as aforesaid Joseph J. Ettor and Antonio Giovannitti did incite, procure said counsel, or command the said person whose name is not known, as aforesaid, to commit the said murder, in manner and form aforesaid, against the peace of the said Commonwealth and contrary to the form of the statute in such cases made and provided.

He, therefore, prays said defendant may be arrested and brought before the Police Court of Lawrence in said county and held to answer to this complaint, and further dealt with relative to the same according to law.

DANIEL W. MAHONEY,
Clerk.

Not Guilty Says Ettor.

"What say you to the complaint, charging you with being accessories to murder? Are you guilty or not guilty?" asked the clerk.

"Not guilty," said the defendants in unison.

Then Ettor and Giovannitti were seated till minor cases were disposed of. Ettor recognized many people in court and bowed several times. His bows met response. Ettor wore his usual informal costume of soft shirt, black tie and business suit.

After the routine cases were out of the way those of the two strike leaders were called again. Attorney Roewer arose, asked for ten days' continuance and added:

"Your Honor: Certain features connected with the case should allow the prisoners to be released on bail, one of which is that an earlier warrant had been sworn to, charging Ettor with inciting to riot. This warrant was not served, but had it been, Mr. Ettor would have been released on bail. For this reason I think he should be released on bail.

"Was Two Miles Away."

"The opinion is prevalent that the arrest of Mr. Ettor is merely to get him out of the way. In fact, the opinion is very prevalent that the purpose of the arrest is to keep him out of action.

"Mr. Ettor was not present at the riot Monday night. In fact, he was two miles away, and did not hear about it till two hours later.

"It is my opinion that to release the prisoners on bail would have a wholesome effect in the community. The purpose of the two men is to conduct the strike in a winning manner, and not to cause bloodshed or destruction of property. In view of the obvious purposes with which the prisoners are here, they should be allowed freedom on reasonable bail."

Judge Chandler said:

"I am disposed to grant your request for a continuance to February 9.

"I find that no other warrant for the arrest of Mr. Ettor has ever been applied for or requested. The statutes of Massachusetts make the fact of accessory to murder equally guilty with the felon. I am not aware that any man charged with murder has ever been let free on bail. There is no reason why these men should be treated differently than any others, in consideration of which the usual course must be taken. Therefore I cannot allow bail."

Ettor and Giovannitti, who were seated during this discussion of bail, were taken after court down into the detention room and thence, via the police van, to the county jail on Hampshire street, where they were booked and locked up.

Jail Is Guarded.

When Ettor and Giovvanni were put in the police van, to be driven to the jail, they were handcuffed together. Three patrolmen, Edward Johnson, John J. Hart and Michael Moore, accompanied them.

The authorities took no chances of an outbreak at the jail. The van was driven to the Auburn street entrance to the jail through side streets. Paralleling the course of the van along adjoining streets rode a troop of cavalry.

When the van approached the entrance to the jail Company H, Eighth Regiment, of Salem, Captain Charles H. Dawson, drew up and formed a guard at the entrance.

A crowd had gathered, supplemented by a throng of school children just let out from morning session.

As the soldiers formed a cordon about the van groans for the soldiers and cheers for the prisoners were heard. But neither groans nor cheers were deep or long. Ettor and Giovannitti went up the jail steps arm in arm, Ettor having his overcoat swinging on his free arm. They were received by Jesse Brown, master of the jail, were quickly booked and were assigned to cells in the West wing.

Calls for Haywood.

Before being lodged in jail Ettor instructed his lawyer to telegraph urgent messages to Vincent St. John and William D. Haywood to hurry to Lawrence and take charge of the strike during the incarceration of Ettor.

Vincent St. John is now in Chicago. He is national secretary of the Industrial Workers of the World, for which Ettor is an organizer. He is regarded as one of the most radical agitators in the I. W. W. movement. He has led mining strikes in the West, and was particularly active in the Homestead Mine strike in the Black Hills, S. D.

William D. Haywood was here earlier in the strike, but left for Toledo. The telegrams to Haywood and St. John say that Ettor is under arrest, and urge that the recipients of the messages come to Lawrence without delay.

Student Is Arrested.

While Ettor and Giovannitti were being arraigned before Associate Justice Chandler, a third member of the strike leaders, Angelo Rocco, a member of the junior class of the Lawrence High School, was arrested on a charge of inciting to riot on January 15. Rocco is twenty-seven years old, an Italian, short of stature and slight in frame. He is a member of the "Inside Committee of Six" which the police say directs the movements of strikers under Ettor's leadership.

Rocco was arrested when he came a second time to the police station and loudly insisted on seeing Ettor. He protested vehemently against his arrest and argued with City Marshal James T. O'Sullivan, who ordered his arrest.

Rocco has been in Lawrence about two years. He came here from Italy and entered the Lawrence High School. He is a good scholar. He lives at No. 130 Jackson street. The police declare he is one of the most active agitators in the strike, and that he incited a riot and an attack on the Uswoco mills on the Monday following the beginning of the strike.

Early to-day Rocco and two other members of the "Inside Committee" came to the police station and asked to see Ettor. Assistant City Marshal Samuel Logan refused permission. They left.

At 9:30 Rocco returned to the station alone. This time City Marshal O'Sullivan was in charge.

"I demand to see Mr. Ettor," said Rocco loudly, "I've got my rights here. Mr. Ettor wants to see me and I want to see him. I must see him."

Marshal—"You are just the fellow I want to see."

Rocco Is Locked Up.

Then the marshal said to Patrolman Lawrie—"Lock this man up."

Rocco—"What for?"

Marshal—"You've had your day and we are having ours now. I'll fill the jails from now on with such rioters and disturbers as you."

Rocco—"I don't know what you mean."

Marshal—"Well, you and your crowd will know what we mean before we get through with you. There are a lot of people in this city who have some rights besides you and your gang that do no work but fatten themselves upon poor unfortunates who do work."

Still protesting, Rocco was led downstairs to a cell.

Charged He Incited a Riot.

The police charge that on Monday, January 15, Rocco incited a riot at the Prospect Mills, South Lawrence. The police say they have four witnesses—State Officer Fred E. Flynn and Lieutenant Vose and Patrolman Lawrie and Duhamel of the local police.

On January 15, while several riots were raging, a group of men gathered in front of the Lawrence Dye Works. The police accuse Rocco of exhorting the crowd not to go to work, but to rush upon the Uswoco Mills and keep operatives out. They say that, urged on by Rocco, the mob been in the streets, the police say, and spent most of his time in the councils of the "Inside Committee of Six" at strike headquarters. His attendance at school has been only occasional.

Lawrence is filled with excitement as a result of the arrest of two of the most prominent of the leaders of the big strike. These arrests followed the death of the woman and of John Ramy, who was bayoneted by a soldier. These are the only deaths so far that have taken place in connection with the strike.

It was expected that there would be more than 15,000 in the funeral procession to-day. But the arrest of the two men was followed by such dire threats that Ettor deemed it wise to not risk getting the striking operatives together.

"I can not be held responsible for what the operatives might do," Ettor wrote to Colonel Sweetser, "when I am not there to control them. I would advise you to have the parade called off."

Before Ettor was arrested he said:

"I know that I am going to be arrested. But they'll send a worse man than I am to take charge of the strike."

More strikers returned to work to-day than on any previous day since the strike began, it was reported.

Militia Guards Police Station.

In preparation for the arraignment and during the morning the police station was guarded by a force of 100 militiamen. Drawn up in lines about the building they excluded all who had not proper credentials. The soldiers were ready to fire at the first sign of any atempt to storm the jail.

Inside the building two officers were stationed outside every door, two inside, while four more stayed in the cell room with the prisoners.

Lawrence is more closely guarded than at any time since the strike began. The climax of the three weeks' struggle is at hand. Feeling runs high, and every precaution is taken against an outbreak.

Colonel Sweetser will to-day hold an inquiry into the death of John Ramey, who died as a result of wounds received while the soldiers were scattering a group of strikers. Friends of the boy claim that he was stabbed by a soldier's bayonet. Colonel Sweetser replies that if the law wants the man who did the stabbing it shall have him.

Charges are made that the soldiers had been drinking and handled their bayonets carelessly. Ramey was one of a group ordered to disperse by the strikers. It is stated that as he was moving away with a bayonet at his back, he turned quickly and the blade penetrated his body. He at first did not appear to be hurt, but collapsed in a short while, and later died.

Thomas Mullen of the Cigar Makers' Union of Haverhill, applied at the police station for permission to see Giovannitti. He was not allowed to enter.

Boy Dies of Injuries.

The second death attributable to the strike of the textile workers came when young Ramey, a Syrian striker, twenty-one years old, died in the Lawrence General Hospital.

Ramey and several companions were being pursued by a squad of troops of the Eighth Regiment after the youths had hurled ice and snow at the militiamen.

The wound at first seemed to be trifling, and the youth was able to walk to his home. Dr. A. H. Cutter, however, ordered him into hospital, and his name was put on the dangerous list at once.

Another bayonet stabbing was reported, but as the man reported as wounded, Peter Psatko of No. 54 Chestnut street, came to the meeting of the Strike Committee to complain that the soldiers would not let him leave his home to open his grocery store, he was not seriously hurt.

Soldiers Keep All on Move.

Except for the stabbing the city has been remarkably quiet. Colonel Sweetser, with 1,500 men under his command, has scattered guards all through the city, and has patroled it with squads.

John Ramey was a Syrian youth, who has been in this country only five years. He came with his mother and two brothers from Falouga, Syria, and has been a worker in the Arlington mill.

A story told by a Syrian who said he saw the affair was to the effect that Ramey tried to grab the gun of one soldier and that a second one stabbed him.

The youth was able to walk to his home, No. 387 Elm street, where he told his mother that he had been stabbed. She sent an elder brother of the boy for Dr. Cutter, who immediately saw that the wound was dangerous.

While waiting for the ambulance Ramey asked the doctor whether he was in danger of dying and the doctor told him frankly that he was.

Mayor's Statement.

Mayor Scanlon has been blamed in many quarters for delaying the arrest of Ettor and has given out the following statement:

"You must remember that under the commission form of government, which went into effect the first of this month, the Mayor is simply the director of the Department of Finance and has absolutely nothing to do with the Department of Public Safety. This department is under the direction of another member of the City Council and the preservation of municipal peace lies solely within his jurisdiction. My opinion as to what should be done with any person who disrupts public safety and places the lives of the citizens in danger is well known, and my attitude in this particular case permits of no misunderstanding.

"Now as to some complaints I have received because of alleged overzealousness on the part of the militiamen. The augmented military force was brought here upon the urgent request of representative citizens who, relying upon the statement of the proper officials, knew that the police could not handle such a situation as developed Monday morning.

By agreement activities of the militia have been confined to what is known as the mill district, and to have entered farther into the city would have been stretching their authority somewhat.

Advises Patience.

"Therefore we requested a sufficient number of soldiers and the effect was remarkable. There was not a suggestion of disorder. The citizens went about their business assured that their lives were not in danger from the foolhardiness of a mob, and we have received numerous messages of congratulation.

"To bring about this condition it is necessary for the military commandant to disperse knots and groups on street corners and elsewhere.

"I can very well see how citizens asked to move on might become impatient and incensed at what they might term a trespass upon their rights, and how an overzealous soldier might arouse resentment.

"I would simply advise good nature on the part of the people, and would urge to do all possible to contribute to the comfort of these soldiers whom we are compelled to call here.

"All can rest assured that any militiaman who presumes to violate the rights of citizens will be disciplined by Colonel Sweetser, whose rare judgment and entire confidence has won for him the high regard of the City Government and the citizens in general.

Ettor Taken by Surprise.

The arrest of Ettor was brought about very quietly by Officers Proctor, Flynn, Bradford and Eustice of the State police, together with Patrolman Ferrari of the Boston police and Michael Byron and Inspector Mulhare of the local force.

Ettor was taken in his room at the Needham Hotel and the whole affair was done so quickly that the daring leader was taken completely by surprise and it was not until he was safely handcuffed to one of the officers and on the way to the police station in the patrol wagon that he seemed to wake up to his position.

The "Strike Napoleon," as Ettor has become known among his colleagues, had put in a strenuous day, with two conferences with Colonel Swetser and a mass-meeting during the night, and he had returned to the hotel for a good night's rest.

He was accompanied by Arthur Yates, secretary of the I. W. W. of New Bedford, who is here arranging plans for a monster mass meeting in the Whaling City to-morrow, when plans for a general strike would be gone over.

LEADER ETTOR PLEADS NOT GUILTY; HELD WITHOUT BAIL

Funeral Parade of Strike Victim Is Stopped By Police.

Yates and Ettor, with one of the latter's lieutenants, had hardly entered the strike leader's room when the police, who had been waiting at the hotel nearly all evening, approached him and told him he was under arrest, charged with being an accessory in causing the death of Miss Nina Lopizzo, who was shot and killed during the riots of Monday night.

Ettor quietly submitted and after being handcuffed to one of the officers was quickly led out to the patrol wagon and driven to the station house, where he was searched and booked and placed in Cell 3.

Soldiers Guard Hotel.

While the police were waiting for Ettor on the inside of the hotel, military forces had been drawn up outside to prevent any demonstration that might take place and escorted the wagon to the station house.

A double guard was placed around the little station house and no one was allowed to enter unless he satisfied the guards that he was there on business.

The charge against the strike leader is the strongest the police could make against him, and this was done to prevent his getting bail.

Negro in Next Cell.

The excitement attending Ettor's arrest had hardly calmed down when the police rushed in with a second prisoner, a colored man, who had been arrested on Hampden street for holding up and robbing a girl with two companions, who made their escape. The negro was put in the cell next to Ettor.

The police who had brought about the arrest of the strike leader left shortly after seeing Ettor in his cell and started out on a search for Arturo Givonetti, who the police declare is responsible for much of the unrest among the strikers.

Givonetti, it is also charged, recently delivered a speech in Italian to a large gathering of mill workers in which he urged them "to go home and rest as brave men during the day and act like wild animals during the night."

Second Leader Arrested.

Givonetti, like his captain, was taken by surprise while he was walking along Lawrence street between Oak and Elm streets early this morning. He took his arrest calmly and refused to say a word when taken to the station house.

Ettor was duped by Colonel Sweetser, who apparently had planned for many hours on taking the strike leader into custody. Earlier in the day Ettor and the military commander had held two conferences over the plans for the funeral parade to-day, in which some 25,000 strikers were to take part.

Sweetser had agreed to allow the men and women to turn out, but had laid down several strict rules, which the strike representatives had agreed to live up to.

No flags were to be carried, no speeches were to be made, and no signs of disorder whatsoever, and the line of march was to be made over the shortest and most direct route to the cemetery, which was mapped out by Colonel Sweetser himself.

Bullet Not Used by Soldiers.

Ettor went away satisfied with his meeting, and called his followers together at strike headquarters, where the final plans for to-day's parade were made. It was after his return from this meeting to the hotel that he was placed under arrest.

The shooting of Miss Lopizzo was gone over by the strike leaders, several of whom charged the soldiers with doing the shooting that resulted in the woman's death, and they further charged that the militiamen also bayoneted two strike-breakers.

On the other side the government is prepared to show that the woman came to her death by a stray bullet fired by some one unknown, and at the autopsy by Dr. Dow he reported that Miss Lopizzo was shot through the heart by a 32-cabilre bullet, a type not used by either the police or militia.

LUCE PUTS BLAME ON LEGISLATURE FOR MILL STRIKE

Lieutenant-Governor Robert Luce, addressing the Canadian Club at the Hotel Bellevue, startled his hearers by declaring that had the Massachusetts Legislature, two years ago, adopted measures that came before it, relating to the settling of differences between employers and employed, the present condition of affairs in Lawrence would be impossible. Lieutenant-Governor Luce said:

"If, two years ago, the Legislature had adopted the Canadian law for the investigation of industrial disputes, the chances are nine out of ten that the Lawrence strike would not have taken place. That is the actual ratio in Canada. In the first four years after its law was enacted, from March, 1907, to March, 1911, 95 strikes were averted or ended, against 10 not averted nor ended in the operation of the public utilities affected by the law.

"The Canadian plan is of the simplest. It provides that men shall not strike and shall not be locked out before the differences have been laid before a board of investigation, consisting of one man named by the employer, one man named by the employes, and a third chosen by the two, or in event of their failure to agree, by the government. After this board has reported the facts, with its advice, employers can lock out or employes can strike, to their hearts' content.

"The practical result is that nearly always the trouble is averted. Face-to-face discussion of the issues, with the help of the force of public opinion based on the actual facts, usually ends in peaceable agreement.

"You see it just reverses the present absurd process. Here they fight first and negotiate afterward. In Canada they perforce negotiate first, and then fight if they can't agree. Here we go on the theory that might makes right, that God is on the side of the strongest battalions. It is the method of determining justice that was common in the Middle Ages, when men settled lawsuits through trial by combat. The verdict went to the litigant who could best wield spear or club.

"If the Lawrence strike works out just results, it will be an accident—the chance of brute force or an uninformed or misinformed public opinion.

Strike Hits All.

"Meantime everybody suffers. There are three parties to the affair—the mills, the strikers, the public—and that third party, the public, in the end suffers most. Whichever wins, employer or employe, the public loses. We have already lost the product of spindles and looms to the value of thousands on thousands of dollars, an irreparable loss, for the wheel never turns with the water that has passed. We are losing the trade that the wages would have made. Worst of all, disrespect for law is breeding in the hearts of thousands, with hostility toward its officers that is a public calamity. The spread of hatred for police and militia is a disaster to the public welfare that cannot be measured.

"So the public may well say to both mill men and strikers, 'A plague on both your houses.' We may well demand that this relapse into barbarism shall stop. We may well insist that modern civilization has no place for industrial warfare.

"Both sides, I know, will say 'The public be d——!' Yet the public has, in fact, most vital interest in the whole matter. We have an interest in the whole matter. We have an interst in the wages paid and the conditions of work, for the simple reason that if these wages are inadequate, if the hours are excessive, if the sanitary conditions are bad, sooner or later large numbers of workers will either be lost to the community through death, or by sickness will become charges either on their families or on the community itself.

"If good health and vitality are not maintained, the community pays the deficit. On the other hand, it is of great importance to the public that industry shall not be suspended, that property shall not be destroyed, that lives shall not be taken.

"The remedy is at hand whenever the third party—the public—awakens to its rights and duties. Two years ago those of us who foresaw just such crises as this, who knew the enormous cost that strikes had brought to Massachusetts, who realized the inadequacy of the law creating our State Board of Conciliation and Arbitration, and who asked the Legislature to adopt the Canadian plan, found ourselves deserted or actively opposed by all three parties in interest. The leaders of organized labor developed strange hostility to the plan among the unions, strange in view of its approval where it has actually been tested, for the Canadian unions believe in it. Only last September the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada in annual convention at Calgary voted down a motion looking to repeal of the act.

"A few employes gave our cause their help, but most of them were lukewarm, and the heads of some of the big open-shop establishments actually opposed us."

"Sooner or later the folly of industrial war will be as clear as the folly of any other war. Then there should be remembrance of and honor for three far-sighted men who led the way for industrial peace—Charles Francis Adams, who years ago pointed out how it could be achieved; W. L. Mackenzie King, the young, hopeful, progressive Canadian who first crystallized the idea into a statute; Charles W. Eliot, who told the people of the United States about it."

An explosion and fire in Dock square caused excitement to-day in the downtown crowds awaiting the parade. Albert Williams, the proprietor of the Avon Hat Company, occupying the third floor of the three-story wooden building at No. 25A Dock square, left a bottle of ammonia near a gas iron, while he went to another part of the building. An explosion occurred during his absence and damaged his establishment to the extent of $200.

VIEWS ON CASE OF RICHESON

No criminal case has ever gripped the mind of New England in a more universal clutch than has that of Clarence V. T. Richeson, the murderer of sweet Avis Linnell. This is shown by the way in which letters pour in to the AMERICAN concerning the case, also the punishment which should be measured out to Richeson. Some writers say "Death and death only for Richeson." Others call for imprisonment for life. Many advocating this do so because they are rigidly opposed to capital punishment as a matter of principle. Some letters just received include the following:

Bloodthirsty People.

Editor AMERICAN:

In reading the letters in your paper about the Richeson case, I am surprised to see how bloodthirsty some people are. Impossible that they are Americans crying for the blood of a fellow American! I am a foreigner and I am all the more surprised as I have always thought that Americans were a merciful people and an enlightened people, and that no one of them would ever wish to send anyone, however wicked, to the electric chair, the most cruel instrument of death ever invented. There are many people who have no religion of any kind and who hate all the clergy, and as Richeson was a minister, these individuals are glad to see him fall and they cry for vengeance only to satisfy their hatred against the clergy and religion—as if the clergy were never tempted by the evil one. They are much more tempted than other mortals.

Perhaps these unfortunate people without any faith or religion, do not know that in the sight of God, they are really worse than Richeson. For there is forgiveness and eternal life for all sinners if they repent—but for those who go through life without ever giving any of their time to the service of the Lord and never believing in him, they are the lost ones for whom there is no mercy or forgiveness in the other world!

M. MARSHALL.

New Bedford.

Thrust at Preachers.

Editor AMERICAN:

Why all the discussion about the Richeson case? Richeson murdered Avis Linnell and their unborn babe. The murder was premeditated. The murderer has confessed. The law fixes the penalty at death. Enforce the law. That's the best preventative of crime.

Richeson has been baptized and undoubtedly will go straight to Heaven, according to the doctrine he has preached. He has "saved" enough people already. No doubt mothers and fathers will be more careful in the future where they send their daughters to be "saved."

According to recent statistics, there are 256 preachers in the different penitentiaries of the United States and Canada, many of them for crimes similar to that of Richeson's.

Why make it 257? Intelligent folks wonder why Almighty God called so many moral perverts to preach the Gospel. Were they really called? I wonder.

"SKOWHEGAN."

Millinocket, Me.

Praise for Governor.

Editor AMERICAN:

I would like to say just a few words in regard to capital punishment vs. the Phelps and Richeson cases. I don't believe in capital punishment under any circumstance and I am glad that Governor Foss took the attitude he has in the Phelps case. I should have been disappointed indeed to have heard that he did not do everything in his power to save Phelps from the chair, for I believe that his heart is in the right place.

I hope and pray that capital punishment will be abolished, and that there will be as much interest shown in regard to doing away with this barbarous custom as there is in the Grand Trunk system. If I were Governor of Massachusetts and my convictions were against capital punishment, I would do my best to do away with it.

Mystic, Ct. MAE JUDD.

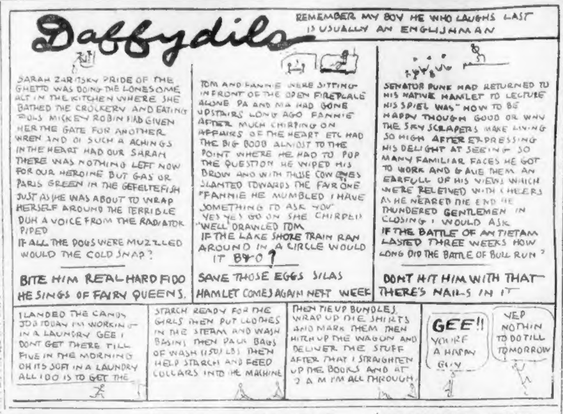

Time for State to Act.

Editor AMERICAN:

The time is ripe for Massachusetts to abolish capital punishment. Is not life sentence punishment enough for offending a creature? Now when we offend our Creator don't we expect that he will have mercy on us? The best living people are on their knees every day asking God to have mercy on them, and how can anybody ask mercy from a just God if they cannot be merciful themselves? God that gives us our life has the right to take it away.

MRS. HIGGINSON ON STAGE AGAIN

Mrs. A. H. Higginson, who was Jean Calducci, appeared before the footlights for the first time since her marriage, in the part of the young wife, when "A Caprice," translated from the French of De Musset by Miss Amy Lowell, was presented on the stage of the Toy Theatre on Lime street. This was the third series of plays presented at the tiny theatre. Besides "A Caprice," Jeannette Marks' "The Cuckoo" was presented. Both are one-act pieces.

This was also the first appearance in a histrionic capacity of Mr. A. H. Higginson, and the work of himself and Mrs. Higginson was anticipated with much interest. The comedy is essentially of Gallic extraction, representing a flighty husband, who arouses jealousy in his wife, and the methods employed to bring him back to the family hearthstone. Mr. Higginson covered himself with glory as the young husband.

Mrs. Higginson has not been given in her professional life many "speaking" parts, and she seemed less at ease than her husband, who had not the benefit of her experience. She looked very pretty as the young wife, and in her scenes with Mr. Higginson she was quite effective. Mr. and Mrs. Higginson, Sr., were in the audience and viewed the work of their son and daughter-in-law with much satisfaction.

Miss Lowell, who made the translation, which she was particular to announce on the program was translated and not "Englished," played the role of the family friend through whose good offices domestic peace was restored.

NOVEL EXHIBITS AT MOTOR BOAT SHOW

The Ninth National Motor Boat and Engine Show in Mechanics building is drawing throngs of interested lovers of motor boating. Exhibitors are enthusiastic over prospects for the coming season. The great attractions from the viewpoint of the public are the auxiliary yawl "Seabird," which made the Trans-Atlantic voyage of 4,000 miles from Providence, R. I., to Rome, Italy; the power boat "Niagara," which successfully navigated the rapids of the great cataract; the "June-bug," the fourteen-foot hydroplane which has a speed record of thirty-two miles, and the novel exhibit of the Waltham Watch Company.

3,000 ATTEND NEWSBOY DANCE

Three thousand guests attended the tenth annual ball of the Boston Newsboys' Protective Union, No. 77, A. F. of L., at Paul Revere Hall. The newsboys, in evening dress, with their sisters, best girls and mothers, had a rousing time. There were 300 invited guests.

One new and pleasing feature that was much appreciated by the gathering was the interspersing the dance numbers with vocal selections by Raoul Romito, tenor, and Bernard Olshansky, bass, of the Boston Opera Company, Miss Bessie McCoy of the "Follies" Company, the Daily trio, who sang "I've Got Yer, Steve," and Messrs. Eastman and Murphy, who sang "Everybody Is Happy in the Winter Time" and other selections. In previous years the vocal concert has been at the intermission.

Speaker Grafton D. Cushing of the House of Representatives, Representative Hays of Brighton, Ex-Representative David P. Keefe of Fall River, Councilor Daniel J. McDonald, who is agent of the Allied Printing Trades Council; T. F. Reagan of Charlestown, the newly-elected supervisor of licensed newsboys of the School Committee; Secretary-Treasurer Martin T. Joyce of the Massachusetts State Branch, American Federation of Labor; Assistant Penal Institutions Commissioner Dennis D. Driscoll, Agent Arthur M. Huddell of the Boston Building Trades Council and Thomas Downey, Jr., were among the guests who were in the grand march that started dancing.

Other special guests present included Headmaster John T. Casey of the English High School, which many of the boys attended; Frank Baker and City Editor Spargo of the Boston Traveler, James W. Reardon, H. R. Williams and Jacques Cohen of the AMERICAN, Rupert R. Ripley of the Boston Herald, S. H. McCutcheon of the Christian Science Monitor, Walter L. Ledwidge of the Boston Journal, Timothy Moynihan, Superintendent James E. Norton of the City Licensing Office, John T. Casey of Mayor Fitzgerald's office force, Ex-Alderman J. Tagen of the Central Labor Union Unionizing Committee, agent Thomas J. Minihan of the Milk Wagon Drivers' Union, Special Newsboy Police Officer Thomas Devine, George J. Raymond, President Frank H. McCarthy of the Boston Central Labor Union, John T. Cashman of the Painters' Union, Miss Anna T. Bowen of the Central Labor Union Executive Board, James Duncan of Quincy, first vice president of the American Federation of Labor; President J. J. Treanor and Vice President Abraham Pearlstein of the Newspaper Wagon Drivers' Union, Superintendent Edward E. Curran and Secretary Alexander I. Peckham of the Newsboys' Club, Charles Sargent of the Hotel and Railroad News Company, Frank L. Locke of the Boston Young Men's Christian Union, Superintendent D. Henry Sullivan of the Public Grounds Department, Tilton S. Bell, Probation Officer James W. Cashman of the Juvenile Court, Superintendent Mitchell Freiman of the West End House, Clerk James A. Kimball of the House of Representatives, Dean Reed of the Berkeley Preparatory School and Attorney Fred H. Wingersky.

President Hyman Cohen led the grand march, escorting Miss Nellie Bloomberg. The others at the head of the line were Benjamin Waldman and Miss Waldman, Charles Fraser and Miss Annie Repuccio and Mr. and Mrs. Simon Robinson.

PRINCESS 'PAT' A GIBSON GIRL

OTTAWA, Jan. 31.—None of the pictures which Charles Dana Gibson, the American artist, sketched this week of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught and the Princess Patricia, during the time he was the guest of the Royal Governor-General, will ever get beyond the family shrine.

"Though I was not commissioned to sketch the Duke and Duchess or the Princess," said Mr. Gibson, "I did make a few sketches of Princess Patricia which I asked her to accept with my compliments. I also drew pictures of their royal highnesses, with which they said they were very pleased."

"Have you found among the Canadian girls any types for future pictures?" Mr. Gibson was asked.

"I have seen some charming women during my short visit to Canada, and perhaps I may express my opinions in my work later," was the artist's diplomatic reply. "My visit to the Connaughts," he added, "was purely personal and was arranged long before the Duke went to New York. I met him in Paris some time ago and he invited me then."

BOSTON MEN FIGURE IN GOLD BRICK CASE

Deputies from the United States marshal's office in Boston left for New York to-day to testify at the trial of George W. Post, the alleged follower of Charles W. Adams, who is charged with fleecing several English heirs out of fortunes in "gold mine" schemes.

Post, who is wanted in Boston, Philadelphia, New York and other large cities in the East for alleged fraudulent use of the mails, was arrested in Chicago and taken to New York, where he is arraigned to-day. Federal authorities from Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago were summoned to appear at the trial.

COUNTRY BOY OR CITY BOY?

Abraham Lincoln is a favorite example used by people writing to the AMERICAN in favor of the country boy in the AMERICAN'S Country Boy Contest. Many taking the opposite view, and inclining to the opportunity of the city boy, cite Mayor Fitzgerald as a city boy who became successful. This is particularly the case of writers living in Greater Boston.

Total prizes of $75 in gold and theatre boxes and seats are given for the best 150-word answers to the question: "Which boy has the greatest natural opportunity for success in life, the city or the country boy?"

The contest was suggested by the comedy by Edgar Selwyn, "The Country Boy," now running at the Park Theatre.

Answers to the questions should be limited to 150 words. Write on one side of the paper only. Sign your name and full address. Each reply should contain one good example, taken from life, to show that the writer's opinion is based on the actual personal achievement of some successful man.

There will be a series of weekly prizes and a series of grand prizes at the end of the contest. The weekly prizes, awarded at the end of each week of the contest, will be: First, $10 in gold; second, one box (six seats) for "The Country Boy" at the Park Theatre, good for Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday following the announcement of the award; third, one pair of seats for "The Country Boy" on Monday, Tuesday or Wednesday.

There are four sets of weekly prizes, one set for each of the four weeks of the contest. At the end of the contest the grand prizes will be awarded. The grand prizes are: First, $20 in gold; second, $10 in gold; third, $5 in gold; fourth, one box (six seats) for "The Country Boy."

Address letters to Country Boy Editor, Boston AMERICAN, No. 82 Summer street, Boston.

Among the answers to the Country Boy question are the following:

City or Country?

Editor AMERICAN:

I believe that investigation will show that whereas fifty years ago the country boy might forge ahead in spite of limited advantages, the marvelous metropolitan conditions of the present offer to the city bred boy the superior start.

He breathes from the first a live atmosphere; great ideas are born and mature about him; temptations met and resisted strengthen and develop his character; to the greatest institutions of learning in the world he has access, though he possess but the assets of energy and intelligence.

Many great men and women have sprung from the region of Greater Boston; notably the educators and writers who, though not achieving special financial distinction, leave the people the rich and lasting legacy of their genious. The late revered Dr. E. E. Hale owed his moral and mental development to city environment. His muse he might have found in the serene beauty of the country hillside, but the conflict of the city, with the joys and sorrows of its humanity, stirred his heart and matured his mind—creating in him an individuality powerful throughout the Christian world.

JUDITH MARSLAND.

No. 79 Westland avenue, Boston.

Pope a Country Boy.

Editor AMERICAN:

The country boy has every advantage to grow up strong in mind and body. He has less temptations and more healthy amusements than the city boy. Unless he is naturally stupid he can get as good an education without being handicapped, as Lincoln was, as there are good schools in the country places now.

Oh, no, a country boy's life is not lonely at all. He has lots of fun and room enough to develop both brain and brawn, coasting over the hills, snowballing, ice hockey and shooting and other sports for Winter and not to mention the Summer sports—tramps by wood and stream, ball playing, swimming, etc., and all outdoors to breathe the pure fair air.

Pius X. is the finest specimen of country boy alive. Pope and peasant, surely he holds an exalted position.

SHE WEARS KIMONO AS DINNER DRESS

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Mrs. Jackson Gouraud, formerly Amy Crocker of San Francisco, sees in the near future victory in her efforts to establish the Oriental costume for both men and women here. Herself attired in a heavily embroidered pink silk kimono, she told of her efforts.

"I never could understand why American men like to wear the ugly clothes they do, especially those high, starched collars. Their clothes are not only ugly, but opposed to all ideas of comfort. My dinner guests always wear Oriental costume, and the men I know have come to like that dress so well that many have spread the fashion among their friends, and I am sure it is only a question of a little while when our men will wear it quite commonly."

MATTAPAN PAYS PRIEST HONORS

The Rev. Francis J. Ryan, pastor of St. Angela's Church, Mattapan, will be the guest of honor at a banquet to be tendered him by the members of the Mattapan Catholic Club, this evening, celebrating the twenty-fifth anniversary to his ordination to the priesthood.

The affair will be held in Oakland Hall, Mattapan square. An attractive program has been arranged under the direction of J. Frank Scannell, who promises an evening of rare enjoyment.

Since assuming charge of the parish, Father Ryan has worked untiringly for its progess.

Lotta Crabtree Saves Horses from the Ice Provides Humane Fund for Chain Shoes
—Boston Sunday AMERICAN, January 21st, 1912
This is the Shoe Referred to Above
KINNELL CHAIN SHOES
Give Your Horse 4 Sure Feet To Work On!
EVERY HORSE THAT WEARS KINNELL-CHAIN-SHOES IS ENABLED TO STAND UP AND DO A FULL DAY'S WORK—
EVEN ON ICY ASPHALT.
JOHN WANAMAKER, Philadelphia, says of the Kinnell-Chain-Shoes: "One pair of horses will do the work of four without them. We found that out from actual test here in the City."
"Fit like a glove, and go on as easily." Save their cost in one day.
THERE'S THE REASON
Never grow dull. Sharp till the finish, and then some more. Just the thing to put on for an hour or two mornings and evenings when the streets are slippery.
To Select right size, measure across here

KINNELL-CHAIN-SHOES not only absolutely PREVENT SLIPPING but also Protect the Frog and Sole From Injury
because every time the horse puts his weight on his feet, the links between the ordinary shoe and the ground that bear all the weight, turn part way over, thus shortening and tightening all four chains and making a suspension bridge over the hollow of the foot. When the horse lifts his feet, the chains loosen slightly and the snow shakes out.
Since the invention of the Kinnell-Chain-Shoe (WHICH DOES FOR THE HORSE WHAT THE NON-SKID CHAIN DOES FOR THE AUTOMOBILE), there is no excuse for horses slipping and falling.
Put a set on your horse and make a noise like an auto.
Every driver can carry a set of Kinnell-Chain-Shoes in his wagon, and when the streets become suddenly slippery, NO MATTER WHERE HE IS, he can strap them on his horse's feet in a MINUTE and go along as though the streets were dry.
After one trial, you will never be without them.
"The most satisfactory equipment to prevent horses from slipping I have ever seen."—Belden Seymour.
MAIL ORDERS receive special attention. Just give measurement across widest part of bottom of hoof, enclose $1 for each shoe and we will send correct size.
FOR SALE by all High-Class Harness Dealers and Jobbers in Boston and New England.
To Horse Owners—Use Kinnell-Chain-Shoes and save your horses sprained joints and broken legs. Prevention is better than cure.
To Drivers—Use KINNELL-CHAIN-SHOES and get home to supper on time.

Desperate Desmond

Claude [illegible], hero, and the American sailors are in hot pursuit of Desmond, who has the beautiful Rosamond in his power. They dash wildly through the narrow streets after the villain, whose bicycle gives him a great advantage over his pursuers. However, in Tripoli, where the streets are so narrow, a bicyclist is likely to be stopped by some obstacle or another. Neighbors are so close in Tripoli that when anyone wishes to borrow a dish or a few cups, they reach across the street for what they want. This is, of course, convenient for the housekeepers, but embarrassing for pedestrians or other passengers.

Naturally the villain Desmond does not pause in his mad career, no matter what splendid home-baked cake is being handed across his pathway. The scoundrel scatters dishes and their contents with an utter disregard of the feelings of the populace. And as the female of the Arab is deadlier than the male, there is trouble in store for Mr. Desmond. However, that notorious scoundrel dashes through everything helter-skelter. Pots and pans go flying through the air; the cake baked by the lady Arab goes with the rest, and Desmond's course is like a cyclone.

And then the women whose cakes have been upset, whose dishes have been broken, join in with the sailors in a mad chase for vengeance. If Desmond falls into the clutches of the Tripolitan housewives, it is good-night for Desmond. But the scoundrel keeps on going, no matter what happens—what does he care for cakes or chinaware? And yet even that hardened scoundrel hesitates when he sees before him a mirror. Seven years of bad luck, he superstitiously believes will follow its breakage. For result see to-morrow's pictures.

The Manicure Lady

She Airs Her Views on the Marriage Question

"I WAS reading in the paper that the Earl of Yarmouth was all in, and was living in a tenement," said the Manicure Lady. "I think it is a shame, George, to put a nice Earl in a place where he has to lift his own ice out of the dumbwaiter and maybe fry his own herring over gas. Them things don't seem right to me."

"I ain't worrying about it," declared the cold Head Barber. "If I remember right, he was the guy that held up the wedding at the door of the church until he got his bit of the Thaw millions. A rat like that ought to live in an attic."

"Maybe you are right, George," said the Manicure Lady, "but I have always been kind of tender to princes since I dreamed when I was a kid that I was going to marry a prince. I have always thought that that dream would come true, George. Maybe that is why I passed up a lot of good American providers like Tom Casey and Joe Blow, the bookmaker."

Joe's Bad Record

"I don't think you made much of a mistake in passing up Joe Blow," said the Head Barber, "because the way the racing game has been going of late it looks like curtains for bookmakers. Them that knows arithmetic, from having been sheet writers, can go and be expert accountants, and them that has a knowledge of electricity can go back to an honest profession like wire-tapping. I don't think you made no mistake in passing up Joe Blow. He owes me eight dollars for shaves and haircuts."

"Well," sighed the Manicure Lady, "I don't suppose it makes any difference one way or the other. I may never be able to marry a prince. I have worked so hard for so many years that I guess my shoulders is getting a little stooped, and maybe by the time the prince comes along he won't want me."

"Don't fish for compliments," said the Head Barber, looking sidewise at the pathetic little curves on the girl's pretty mouth. "You know you are a queen, and you are just trying to make me say so."

"You're a regular fellow, George," she declared, all the puckers going out of her brow in a flash. "I ain't so sure after all that I wouldn't rather marry a man like you than a prince."

"There's only one like me," said the Head Barber, guardedly, "and I'm the one, and I'm married now."

She Reassures Him

"Don't get nervous, George," said the Manicure Lady. "I wasn't making no plans to be a co-respondent or anything of that kind. We had enough of that co-respondent stuff the time they yanked your brother Wilfred into one of them divorce suits. The old gent was that mad when he seen an item in the paper that his son was named as a co-respondent that he came near kicking poor Wilfred out in the snow, but that night the old gent went to a big dinner and when he got home he was full of peace on earth, so he forgot all about it. It wasn't the poor boy's fault at that, George.

"It seems that he met a swell lady at one of them club dinners, and when he found out that she had wrote some poetry he was that taken with her that he seen her home on the street car so he could get her address, and the next day he wrote her a poem and sent it to her, and her husband opened it by mistake. He said he didn't notice the 's' on the end of the 'Mr.'—you know that old stall the married men use when they ain't got any more magazines to read and start reading letters. So he started a divorce, and he won it just on the strength of Wilfred's poem, and all the time the poor boy didn't know that she was married. This was the poem, George:

"Thou goddess of grandeur, thou beauty divine,
Though but a poor poet I bow at thy shrine.
Oh, fly with me, darling, for thee, love, I sigh—
We can live at Rye Beach, where the rent isn't high."

"When your brother called himself a poor poet," declared the Head Barber, after a pause, "he was right!"

How to Treat Pimples

It is really remarkable how Cadum, the new remedy, causes pimples to disappear. Bad cases are frequently relieved in a few days. Cadum causes pimples to dry up and fall off, leaving the skin soft and smooth. Pimples are a disease of the skin, and are not caused by bad blood, as many people suppose. Cadum helps these disfiguring blemishes because it is applied direct to the trouble. It is an antiseptic and prevents infection from disease germs. Cadum should be immediately applied to a pimple, scratch, sore or wound, as neglect of these small troubles sometimes proves serious. At all druggists, 10c. and 25c. per box.

Felt Insulted

"HOW is it you came home from your party so early last night, Susan? Didn't you enjoy yourself?"

"Yes, ma'am, but the young man as took me in to supper insulted me."

"Insulted you, Susan! Why, what did he say?"

"He asked me if my programme was full; and I'm sure I never had nothing but a sandwich and a glass of lemonade; so I came away home."

The Prince and the Plutocrat; or, The Grand Babylon Hotel

Arnold Bennett's Great Mystery Story

TO-DAY'S INSTALMENT

By Arnold Bennett

Copyright, The Frank A. Munsey Company

Part 1. (Continued)

"DO you really think, dad, there was anything between Jules and poor Mr. Dimmock?"

"Think! I know! I tell you I saw that scamp give Dimmick a wink last night at dinner that might have meant—well!"

"So you caught that wink, did you, dad?"

"Why? Did you?"

"Of course. I was going to tell you about it."

The millionaire grunted.

"Look here, father," Nella whispered suddenly, pointing to the balcony immediately below them. "Who's that?"

She indicated a man with a bald patch on the back of his head who was propping himself up against the railing of the balcony and gazing calmly into the ballroom.

"Well? Who is it?

"Isn't it Jules?"

"Gemini! By the beard of the prophet, it is."

Jules at the Ball

"Perhaps Mr. Jules is a guest of Mrs. Sampson Levi."

"Guest or no guest, he goes out of this hotel, even if I have to throw him out myself."

Theodore Racksole disappeared without another word, and Nella followed him.

But when the millionaire arrived on the balcony floor he could see nothing of Jules, neither there nor in the ballroom itself.

He searched everywhere in vain, and then at last, by tortuous stairways and corridors, returned to his original post of observation, that he might survey the place anew from that vantage ground.

To his surprise he found a man in the dark little room watching the scene of the ball as intently as he himself had been doing a few minutes before.

Hearing footsteps the man turned with a start.

It was Jules.

The two exchanged glances in the half light for a second.

"Good evening, Mr. Racksole," said Jules calmly. "I must apologize for being here."

"Force of habit, I suppose," said Theodore Racksole, dryly.

"Just so, sir."

"I fancied I had forbidden you to re-enter this hotel?"

"I thought your order applied only to my professional capacity. I am here tonight as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Sampson Levi."

"In your new role of a man about town, eh?"

"Exactly."

"But I don't allow men about town up here, my friend."

"For being here I have already apologized."

"Then, having apologized, you had better depart; that is my disinterested advice to you."

"Good night, sir."

"And I say, Mr. Jules if Mr. and Mrs. Sampson Levi should again invite you to my hotel, you will oblige me by declining the invitation. You'll find that will be the safest course for you."

"Good night, sir."

Jules Was Not Invited

Before midnight struck, Theodore Racksole had ascertained that the invitation list of Mr. and Mrs. Sampson Levi, though a somewhat lengthy one, contained no reference to any such person as Jules.

He sat up very late. To be precise, he sat up all night.

He was a man who, by dint of training, could comfortably dispense with sleep when he felt so inclined, or when circumstances made such a course advisable.

He walked to and fro in his room, and cogitated as few people besides Theodore Racksole could cogitate.

At 6 o'clock in the morning he took a stroll round the business part of his premises, and watched the supplies come in from Covent Garden, from Smithfield, from Billingsgate and from other strange places.

He found the proceedings of the kitchen department quite interesting, and made mental notes of things that he would have altered.

At 7 o'clock he happened to be standing near the luggage lift, and witnessed the descent of vast quantities of luggage and its disappearance into a van.

"Whose luggage is that?" he inquired, peremptorily.

The luggage clerk, with an aggrieved expression, explained to him that it was the luggage of nobody in particular; that it belonged to various guests, and was bound for various destinations; that it was, in fact, "expressed" luggage, dispatched in advance, and that a similar quantity of it left the hotel every morning about that hour.

Theodore Racksole walked away, and breakfasted upon one cup of tea and half a slice of toast.

At 10 o'clock he was informed that the inspector of police desired to see him.

The inspector had come, he said, to superintend the removal of the body of Reginald Dimmock to the mortuary adjoining the place of inquest, and a suitable vehicle waited at the back entrance of the hotel.

The Empty Coffin

The inspector had also brought subpoenas for himself and Prince Aribert of Posen and the commissionaire to attend the inquest.

"I thought Mr. Dimmock's remains were removed last night" said Racksole wearily.

"No, sir. The fact is, the van was engaged for another job."

The inspector gave the least hint of a professional smile, and Racksole, disgusted, told him curtly to go and perform his duties.

In a few minutes a message came from the inspector requesting Mr. Racksole to be good enough to come to him on the first floor.

Racksole went. In the ante-chamber where the body of Reginald Dimmock had originally been placed were the inspector and Prince Aribert and two policemen.

"Well?" said Racksole, after he and the Prince had exchanged bows. Then he saw a coffin laid across two chairs.

"I see a coffin has been obtained," he remarked. "Quite right."

He approached it.

"It's empty," he observed unthinkingly.

"Just so," said the inspector. "The body of the deceased has disappeared. And His Serene Highness Prince Aribert informed me that though he has occupied a room immediately opposite on the other side of the corridor, he can throw no light on the affair."

"Indeed I cannot!" said the Prince, and though he spoke with sufficient calmness and dignity, one could see that he was deeply pained, even distressed.

(To Be Continued To-morrow.)

Arnold Bennett's great mystery story, "The Prince and the Plutocrat; or, The Grand Babylon Hotel," is running serially in the daily and Sunday AMERICAN. A generous instalment will be printed in Sunday's AMERICAN.

For the Tourist

IF you expect to go abroad pray that some one may give you one of the convenient cases known as a "Pullman apron."

This is a traveling case of pliable leather that folds into small compass, and when open holds in separate compartments brush, comb, mirror, manicure scissors, nail file, wash cloth, soap box, hairpin box, tooth powder, and toilet water bottles.

The bought cases are rather costly, but one is easily made at home from pliable leather or suede lined with oiled silk, with straps and pockets for all necessary toilet articles. Leave an extra piece at one end for a flap that buttons down over the double case when closed, like an envelope flap. To the upper corners sew two inch straps of leather with buckle at one end, through which the other end is slipped.

The Sewing Machine

By REV. THOMAS B. GREGORY

THE first real practical sewing machine was patented by Elias Howe of Spencer, Massachusetts, sixty-six years ago.

Before that date, however, much progress had been made in the direction of this most useful invention. In fact, it may be said that the glory of the great invention belongs to many men.

Away back in 1755 Charles F. Wiesenthal laid the foundation of machine sewing by the invention of the double-pointed needle with eye in the centre, and in 1790 Thomas Saint devised a machine for stitching, quilting or sewing, principally in leather work.

In 1830 the Frenchman, Barthelmy Thirmonier, of St. Etienne, made a real working machine which he used in his tailoring business, very much to his peril, however, as an ignorant crowd wrecked his shop and came very near killing the unfortunate inventor.

Thirmonier was not discouraged by the near-tragedy, and kept on until he got his machine patented both in France and Great Britain. The machine, which was entirely of metal, was a decided improvement on the first one, and promised great things; but a conspiracy of untoward circumstances blasted the inventor's prospects, and he died unfriended and unrewarded.

Then it was that Howe, apparently quite unconscious of what had been done by others, began thinking of the machine which he succeeded in patenting in 1846.

But again the plural character of the honor of the great invention appears. The two most important features of the Howe machine—the curved eye-pointed needle and the underthread shuttle, without which his invention would have been no improvement upon the machines that had gone before it—were invented by Walter Hunt twelve years previously.

Says a high authority: "Hunt reaped nothing of the enormous pecuniary reward which has been shared among the introducers of sewing machines, and it is all the more necessary that his great merit as an inventor should be insisted upon."

Howe had received in royalties up to the time of his death in 1867 more than two millions of dollars, while Hunt, the man who invented the essential features of the Howe machine many years before Howe got out his patent, received nothing. Such is "justice," as it is seen "in the corrupted currents of this world." One soweth and another reapeth, and so it will probably be to the end of time.

And yet there is a sort of justice in things even as they are. It appears that Walter Hunt failed to patent his invention, while Elias Howe patented his. Had Hunt done what he ought to have done he would have received both the glory and the reward.

Gen. Lee's Humor

GENERAL Robert E. Lee, the famous Confederate commander, had a vein of quaint humor. When hostilities in the Civil War were about to begin an official in great despondency reported to the General that it would require some time for the old flintlock "shooting irons" of his company to be changed into percussion locks. He was in a dilemma.

"Well," said the General at last, "all I can suggest is to telegraph to Mr. Lincoln to have the war put off for three weeks!"

STEEL TRUST WILL REPLY TO BRANDEIS

By THOMAS C. SHOTWELL.

The stock market closed in the midst of a rally yesterday, brought about by discovery on the part of traders that the Steel Trust had earned its dividend for the December quarter with something to spare. Actunal earnings were $23,105,115 and were not announced until after the close of the market. Another cheering influence was the "Return of William K. Vanderbilt" as a power in the railroad world. Belief hat the Steel Trust in its answer to the government's suit for dissolution, which will be filed in a few days, would jusify all of its transactions, concentrated the attacks made on it by Attorney Brandeis, who characterizes it as a slave driver.

HARRMAN STOCKS DEPRESS MARKET.

Earnings of the Harriman railroads were the chief depressing influence of the day. These earnings had been discounted.

While the Union Pacific showed a net decrease of $630,419 and the Southern Pacific a net decrease of $716,505, the loss was due chiefly to an increase of operating expenses and taxes. The Union Pacific showed a gross decrease of only $172,190, and Southern Pacific's gross was decreased $269,987. This falling off in business was much less than had been expected, and the increase of operating expenses is easily accounted for by the strike.

Theodore Roosevelt contributed somewhat to the cheerful influences of the day with a statement through his editorial associate, Lawrence F. Abbott, that he would not accept a nomination for the Presidency unless it came without a contest. Wall street believes this puts Roosevelt entirely out of the race. The Presidential campaign therefore, is looked forward to with but little apprehension.

Specialties Are Advanced Sharply.

Specialties attracted much attention, particularly National Biscuit, which sold up to 150. This is becoming a box-fed nation, and the companies dealing most largely in paper boxes, with which considerable breakfast food and crackers are delivered, are making great fortunes.

Big Four Railroad stock was another specialty that advanced sharply. The Tobacco stocks were strong also, although less spectacular than they have been recently. United Cigar Stores and British-American were the strong feature of that list.

Great Northern Ore certificates turned weak as a result of the report published by the trustees. This report was disappointing. The Street had hoped there was at least $10,000,000 of surplus in the hands of the trustees. That they have only a little more than $5,000,000, and that the Steel Trust has taken more than half of the ore to which it is entitled, was not pleasing to the shareholders.

St. Paul Statement for Effect?

St. Paul stock sold at the lowest price in recent years when it touched 104⅜. It rallied, however, with other issues at the close, but ended the day with a net loss. Professional traders believe that the pessimistic statements made by the St. Paul management recently are put out for effect.

The probabilities are that if insiders want to do anything in the market now they want to buy stocks. Besides, St. Paul does not fairly represent the business conditions of the country. Its Pacific coast extension has put it under heavy expense in a territory very rich, but not sufficiently developed to justify expectations of even fair business now.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS

COPPER PRICES RANGE HIGHER

STATE STREET, Jan. 31.—Midday—The Boston market opened quiet with copper stocks ranging a little higher. Trading grew more active in the first hour.

Early prices included Royale at 22, up 1; Franklin at 12⅞, up ⅛; Mayflower 8, off ¼; Mohawk 54, up 2 points; Chino 26¼, up ⅜; Range 51½, up ½.

The rise in Mohawk was attributed to a private wire dispatch to Paine, Webber & Co., stating that the labor trouble is over, the miners having returned to work last night.

Boston loaning rates for stocks this morning were: Amalgamated 2 and 1, Telephone 1, Steel 2, Sugar 1 to 2, Mass. Gas 1 per cent.

Bears Raid Steel and Union Pacific.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—United States Steel common and Union Pacific, two of the most important of the market leaders, were pressed for sale and yielded substantial fractions at the opening to-day. However, the majority of the other issues showed a steadier tone.

After opening unchanged, Steel lost 5-8, but later rallied and at the end of fifteen minutes was only ⅜ below Tuesday's close.

The same loss was sustained by Union Pacific. Reading, Baltimore & Ohio and Southern Pacific made slight gains. The report of earnings of the Harriman system and the report of the U. S. Steel Corporation had but little effect, both having been discounted.

Amalgamated Copper was from ⅛ to ¼ up. Canadian Pacific was unchanged here. The curb was dull. Americans in London were firm.

Cotton Higher on Spot Demand.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Although the cotton market opened with prices unchanged to 3 points lower in response to disappointing cables, a firmer tone developed and, after the call, prices made a net advance of 2 to 3 points on demand from spot interests. News from England said that the textile situation there was less favorable. Spot prices in Liverpool were unchanged; futures in Liverpool were steady.

NEW YORK, Jan. 31.—Cotton opening: January, 9.39; March, 9.43; May, 9.59; July, 9.74; September, 9.77; October, 9.84; December, 9.90.

Wheat Opens Listless and Low.

CHICAGO, Jan. 31.—Wheat showed less life and less strength than the other grains this morning. Lower cables and bearish Argentine news caused declines at the start, but the market rallied. There was a strong market in corn. The market for oats opened strong, being ⅛ to ¼ cent up.

Grain opening: Wheat, May 103 to 102⅞, September 94½ to 94⅝, July 96 to 96⅛; corn, May 67⅝, July 67⅝, September 67⅝.

Oats, July 46⅝ to 46¾, September 41½, May 51¾ to 51⅞. Pork, May 16.40. Lard, May 9.45. Ribs, May 8.87. Provisions and hogs were a shade lower.

STATE ST. NEWS FOR INVESTORS

One copper forecast is that surplus stocks in this country to-morrow will be at least 10,000,000 pounds less than on January 1. Estimates based upon New York Custom House returns lead to the belief that January exports will greatly exceed 70,000,000 pounds. Regarding prices for the metal, the American Smelting & Refining Company offered electrolytic in Europe yesterday at a price for which the New York equivalent is less than fourteen cents. This was the first important break in price in many weeks. The United Metals Selling Company and Phelps, Dodge & Co. would make no price concessions. They held at 14½ cents. In the London market Henry R. Merton & Co. were quoting 14⅛ cents a pound. The American Smelting & Refining Company also reduced lead prices from 4.45 to 4.25. Private reports reached Wall street yesterday that the Guggenheims were offering copper in Europe at prices well below those quoted in the American market.

Students of the stock market are somewhat mystified by the upward movement in New York Central. William K. Vanderbilt's resumption of the active management of the road seems to have inspired a great deal of confidence in Wall street. It is predicted there that the New York Central will hereafter have "a Pennsylvania management." Recent reports show there has been a great improvement in the physical and financial condition of the property, which has remarkable natural advantages. Undoubtedly there will be a very important financial move made soon by the management. It is pretty generally understood that a big blanket mortgage issue is to be made.

That strikes are very costly to railroads was shown in the earnings of the Harriman lines for December. The gross revenues of Southern Pacific fell off $269,987, while operating expenses and taxes increased $446,607. The net loss was $716,505. The Union Pacific report was not as bad, but that is about the best that can be said of it. Its loss in gross revenues was $172,190 and its expense increase was $458,228. It received in net $630,419 less than during the last month of 1910. The strike on the Harriman lines has come to an official end, but the effects of it are still apparent.

The Wabash road receivers will have about $11,000,00 for rehabilitation work. A court order issued in St. Louis will permit the borrowing of from $9,000,000 to $10,000,000, and there is about $1,000,000 in cash also available. Besides these sums the court authorized the road to spend $3,525,000 for new equipment, $2,954,000 for second track work, and more than $1,000,000 for miscellaneous expenses. There will be a great deal of double tracking done.

Regarding the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul common stock, whose weakness was one of the market features yesterday, it is said by the New York World: "The impression was general in Wall Street that the stock was being depressed for the purpose of allowing certain persons who sold their stock before the recent dividend reduction to replace their holdings."

The report of the United States Steel Corporation earnings for the last quarter of 1911 showed that the big concern had made just enough to pay regular dividends. Nothing better had been looked for by the well-informed. In fact, the amount earned was rather an agreeable surprise to all but the bear element. The business of the period which the report covered was the worst in years. During the past two months the steel trade has been on the mend, and now the outlook for the corporation is far better than it has been for a long time.

ELECT POSTMASTER AS POLITICAL RUSE

BEREA, O., Jan. 31.—Berea elected a postmaster yesterday. Of course, the slight formality of appointment by the President and approval by the Senate is yet to be observed. Carl J. Eckert was the people's choice. There were nine candidates. The election is regarded as a clever move by Representative Howland, as it relieved him from the difficulty of making a choice of a man among so many applicants for his recommendation.

SEVEN RESCUED AT LYNN BLAZE

Seven persons were rescued during a fire which caused a loss of $500 in the two-story building at No. 208 Summer street, Lynn, early to-day.

The blaze was discovered in the restaurant of Jacob H. Goldberg, on the first floor, by Patrolman Brazzell who sounded an alarm and then returned to the building.

Rushing upstairs he found the entire building filled with dense smoke. Benjamin Glazer, his wife and their two children, nine and eleven years, occupied the floor over the restaurant. They were partially overcome by smoke and cries of "Fire!" had failed to arouse them.

The firemen arrived and Lieutenant Stirling of Engine No. 6 joined Brazzell on the second floor. They broke down the door of Glazer's apartments and carried his wife and children to the street. They also rescued Abraham Halphen, Louis Rodman and Annie Sokolaski, lodgers, from the same floor. The latter had been overcome and Brazzell and Stirling found difficulty in getting her safely out of the building.

The fire which started from some unknown cause burned part way into the second floor, but the firemen managed to confine most of the damage to the restaurant. The rescued were carried to the street in their night clothes. They were sheltered in the homes of neighbors until the blaze had been extinguished.

AT THE HENRY F. MILLER PIANO WAREROOMS, 395 BOYLSTON ST.

The only place in Boston where NEW Henry F. Miller pianos can be bought. Other Boston dealers who advertise "Henry F. Miller" pianos have only second-hand ones to show. One of these was advertised recently as "little used," but it proved on investigation to have been in daily use in a music school for nearly twenty-nine years. We gladly give to anybody the exact age of any second-hand "Henry F. Miller" piano upon being furnished its number.

In addition to "Henry F. Miller" pianos, we also show a large and beautiful variety of reliable pianos by other makers which we guarantee are marked at honest prices—$125, $150, $175, $200, $225, $250. Many "canvassers" would ask at least $100 more for any of them. We employ no canvassers; neither do we advance prices if buyers desire easy instalment terms—$10 down and $5 per month. We believe the piano we price at $200 is a better piano than the so-called "four hundred-dollar" piano which is sold under "guessing," "contest" or "certificate" schemes. No matter WHAT price you wish to pay for a piano, you cannot afford not to see and hear our offerings. A call at our warerooms will surely protect you from being overcharged elsewhere.

Most important of all, you have the time-honored reliability and integrity of our house behind every transaction. Established 1863. HENRY F. MILLER & SONS PIANO CO.

Time for Boston and Lawrence to Get Together

Patriotism, Righteousness, Charity, Common Decency, Demand the Adoption by Boston Mill-Owners and Lawrence Mill-Workers of the 30-Day Truce Suggested by the Governor of the Commonwealth—Will Either Side Flout Public Sympathy by Saying "No"?

Governor Foss has suggested a modus vivendi in the Lawrence strike situation.

The Governor requests the men to agree to return to their work, receiving their old wages for two hours less work per week, and he asks the mill owners to agree to pay the men, if they will return, the same wages for fifty-four hours which they have been receiving for fifty-six hours. Thereupon he asks both parties to give him thirty days from the beginning of this armistice to effect a permanent settlement of the strike.

This is a fair proposition. Nothing could be fairer both to employer and employe.

It protects the workingmen from their greatest dangers, which are hunger and the temptation to violence on the part of some of the hotheads who have come among them.

It protects the mill owners from their greatest dangers, which are their tendency, so far exhibited, to ignore the public interest in the situation by refusing to confer, and the loss of trade, which is beginning to be very brisk in their line.

By the Governor's proposal the workingmen return to their work without surrendering any of their demands, and the employers return to their manufacturing without yielding to any demands which they have rejected.

But the difference between the situation which the Governor proposes and the situation which exists now is great and important. The workingmen would not be obliged to starve and freeze in this severe weather. The soldiers could be dispersed and sent back to their civil avocations.

Peace would reign in the city while the Chief Magistrate of the State, a great manufacturer and himself an employer of labor, with public sentiment behind him, devoted the next thirty days to devising some way of satisfying both sides of the controversy.

Who will be rash enough to stand in the way of accepting the Governor's proposal, either on the part of the workingmen or on the part of the mill owners. Is it Mr. Haywood, or is it Mr. Wood?

Those who have dealt with Mr. Ettor say that he is an intelligent man. Therefore he knows the utter folly, the suicidal error, of violence in this situation. A just cause in a community where public opinion is powerful and sound should avoid violence as a plague.

Mr. Ettor knows that by appealing to violence and lawlessness the workmen force the government to ally itself with the mill owners and to alienate a friendly public sentiment. We cannot settle grave questions by individual violence, and those who employ it must lose.

To the mill operatives now on a strike in Lawrence we say this: You know that you have a just cause. You know that the people of Massachusetts are a just people; that they have consented to be taxed in order that you might receive higher wages than foreign workmen; that they are paying to-day nearly twice as much for the goods which you manufacture as Englishmen and Canadians pay for the same quality of goods in their country, where they have not consented to be taxed by a protective tariff on woolen goods.

You know that the people of Massachusetts did not realize that while they were bearing this burden for the sake of giving you higher wages you were receiving but $5, $6 and $7 a week in wages.

You know how great must be their surprise and indignation now when they have discovered the tremendous fraud which has been practiced upon them for years.

You know, therefore, that public sympathy is with you if you do nothing which is unlawful to alienate it.

You know that public sentiment, now awakened to a knowledge of the true conditions, will not tolerate such wages as are paid to you while your employers are allowed to tax the public under the pretence that this tax increases your wages.

You know that if you can hold out long enough you will prevail in this contest.

Therefore, the Governor's proposal that you return to your work for thirty days without surrendering any of your demands is decidedly a favorable proposition to you, for it saves you from being starved and frozen into submission, while the Governor works in your behalf.

Of the mill owners the AMERICAN asks a few questions.

Can you afford to reject the Governor's proposals?

Do you not know that your rejection of every fair proposal for a conference is a confession of weakness in a situation in which you cannot deny the right of the public to interfere, because for years you have been asking the public to pay more for your woolen goods in order, as you pretended, that you might pay your workingmen more than they receive in Europe?

Do you not realize that by resisting every fair effort to compromise the differences in this dispute you are rushing headlong into a congressional investigation?

Do you think that you could successfully withstand an investigation of your profits, the wages you pay and the methods you employ to bring labor from Europe into this country and into your factories?

Do you think that you can keep your tariff graft when the people of this country learn officially that while you are asking them to pay double for the goods they buy of you your workingmen are receiving less wages than the man who wields a pickaxe in the street, who carries a hod, who weeds and plows on a farm, and whose employer gets no fancy prices, under a protective tariff, for his goods?

How would the future look to you if the American people should tell you to stand upon your own feet, fight the battle of profit and loss with your own resources of capital, skill and energy, upon equal terms with other business men? How would it feel to get back to scratch?

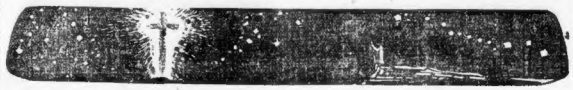

Get together, gentlemen, on both sides.

Cardinal O'Connell's Return

By Clement L. Pollock

ACROSS the seas from storied haunts of Rome
He journeys to a radiant welcome home;
Marked by rare favor, our New England son
Wears graciously insignia fairly won.

The mystery of ancient art and tome
Broods in the shadow of St. Peter's dome,
Where Liberty first saw the dawning light
Then, stricken, slumbered in the pall of night.

Yet through it all, in cloistered Vatican
One heart breathed ceaseless love for fellow man;
That flame of faith, unswerving as the sun,
Burns brighter as Time's tragic threads are spun.

The Holy Father, compassionate and sweet,
Whose yearning love draws millions to his feet,
Serene and steadfast, shut from worldly strife,
In willing service spends his saintly life.

Bearing a blessing from his gentle lip
The Prince returns from his epochal trip,
Not set apart upon a royal throne,
Where poor and lowly may not claim their own;

But that, through loftier rank, yet kindlier sway,
The weary world may glimpse a brighter day—
Through tender, contrite heart in him may find
A deeper sympathy with frail mankind.

A thousand welcomes, Cardinal and Friend!
To swell the greeting gladsome voices blend.
May higher duty faithfully acclaim
E'en brighter lustre to your honored name!

Boston's Welcome To-day to Cardinal O'Connell Is a Genuine Expression of Popular Gladness Over His Return to His Native State

Boston gives cordial welcome to-day to Cardinal O'Connell on his return from Rome, to which city he journeyed three months ago on a mission of highest honor, not to himself alone, but to all his co-religionists throughout New England.

Through the elevation of Archbishop O'Connell to the exalted dignity which he has attained, this section of the United States has now a direct influence and a potent voice in the government of the Catholic Church.

Heretofore, New England has had many bishops and one archbishop, all of them scholarly and saintly men, who wisely guided the affairs of the ancient church, from the days of the well loved Cheverus to the close of the career of the lamented Williams.

But none of these could sit in the conclave and join in the election of a new Pope, or officially pass upon some feature of church government, the decision upon which might affect vitally the interests of the Catholic Church in America.

For the future, this shall not be so. To the single, though influential, voice of Gibbons there will be added in the conclave of the future, the voices of Farley, of Falconio and of O'Connell, each of whom may be trusted to give full expression, on occasions of important decision, to American opinion, which does not always run on parallel lines with European ideas.

While the responsibility of the office of Cardinal is large, so too are the honor and the dignity which accompany the rank. The Boston churchman upon whom this office has been conferred and who returns to his charge to-day is a credit to Boston and to his native State and the people of both City and Commonwealth bid Cardinal O'Connell warmest welcome.

That the years of Cardinal O'Connell be long and plenty, that he [illegible] opportunity without stint to do good in this great and populous community, is a hope which will find an echo in the hearts of all right-minded men and women, whatever their faith may be.

That Daily Hunt for Trouble

Ninety Per Cent of Men Start Out in the Morning Fearing Result of Day's Work

By FRANCES L. GARSIDE

"A CROWD of troubles passed him by.
As he with courage waited.
He said: 'Where do your troubles fly,
When you are thus belated?'
'We go,' they said, 'to those who mope,
Who look on life dejected;
Who weakly say good-by to hope;
We go where we're expected.'"

IF every man started off in the morning wearing a tag appropriate to his mental condition, 90 percent would wear a tag like this: Looking for Trouble."

And every one finds what he seeks. If you want authority for this, look in the Bible.

Consciously, or unconsciously, most of us expect when we rise in the morning that this is the day when the worst will happen.

We are not sure about the success of the business deal launched yesterday; Johnny's sore throat is more inflamed, and we fear diphtheria. If there is no mail, something wrong, and if there is mail, we decide before opening it that it will contain bad news.

We HOPE everything will be all right, of course. But we FEAR it won't, and that FEAR is the invitation to trouble.

It is as if a sheep herder feared the wolves would break in, and then let down the bars of the fold to show how easily they COULD get in and devour his sheep. Of course, he HOPES they won't break in, but with the bars off like that, it would be impossible to keep them out.

Don't you see?

And the wolves, seeing the bars down, and knowing that they are EXPECTED, break in, and the sheep are scattered.

The sheep herder waits about his luck. He always KNEW, he complains, that some day just this disaster would happen.

That is why it happened. Because he KNEW it would.

You may not be a sheep herder, but, like him, you are herding your plans, your hopes, your future. Somewhere in in your office, or in your home, you have built a fold around your interests, and set yourself the task of guarding them from wolves.

There are always wolves; there always will be. You know they are hungry for your possessions. To double their existence, or to dispute their ravenous appetities, would be to admit you are a fool.

You KNOW they are looking for weak places in your fences. You must know THAT, but you must also know where the weak places are. Not that you may call attention to them, but that you may make them strong.

Hope strengthens. Fear weakens. The man who hopes keep his head. The man who fears loses it.

He reasons in a circle, always arriving at the starting point, which was Fear. He gets nowhere, because he goes 'round and 'round, so whipped-up and urged by his fears that he has no thought left but to keep ahead of the imaginary hobgoblins and ghosts that are in pursuit.

He can't look ahead through FEAR, and stumbles and falls. He falls right into the trouble he feared.

He finds what he sought. All of us do.

Trouble goes where it is expected. If you fear sickness you will be sick. If you fear debt, misfortune, failure, disgrace; if you are constantly looking for the worst to happen; if you search the skies, not for a rainbow, but for a thunder cloud, you will find what you are looking for.

The rainbow may be there, but you are looking for signs of a storm and your eyes pass over the promise of better things in their search for evil omens.

And you find what you seek.

For troubles always go where they're expected.

LETTERS FROM AMERICAN READERS

FROM A BLUEJACKET'S MOTHER.

Editor AMERICAN:

I have noticed recently several writings in the AMERICAN concerning our sailors. My son is a bluejacket and has been four years, and I am sorry to say I have hardly ever been out with him in his uniform but what some one would make some insulting remark. I think it is dreadful. If they only knew what Uncle Sam's boys in blue go through they would sing a different tune. I know some bluejackets do things they ought not to, but very few, considering the thousands in the service.

I, for one, would go any where with the uniform of blue beside me, in spite of all slurs and insulting remarks. I am proud my son is a boy in blue.

BUSINESS AND POLITICS

Editor AMERICAN:

If Philander Knox was appointed Attorney-General by President McKinley, at the suggestion of Andrew Carnegie, when he (Mr. Knox) was attorney for the Steel Trust, in which Mr. Carnegie was interested, what are we to think of the wisdom of such an appointment when we come to consider what effect it might have upon the government prosecuting the same corporations for violating the law?

Does not statesmanship call for better wisdom in the appointment of public servants?

Let us get away from the dollar, and a little more to the people, so that this government shall be truly representative. Divorce business from politics.
